Junk Mail Row Erupts

Postmen Threaten Walkout

OTTAWA (CP) — Leaders of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada were meeting with post office officials this afternoon to try to prevent a dispute about delivery of "junk" or third-class mail from erupting into a national walkout.

Jim Mayes, first vice-president of the union, said in an interview today that he will ask postal officials to delay imposing new delivery regulations until he can meet Deputy Postmaster-General J. A. H. Mackay next week.

He said that if the post office goes ahead with its plans to reorganize the delivery system for "dear householder" mail, "we can't be responsible for the reaction of the membership."

Earlier, a union spokesman said a bulletin will go out to all of the 12,000 union members today advising them to "lock up and leave" if they are forced to conform to the post office proposals.

William Findlay, second vice-president of the letter carriers, said in an interview the post office had breached an agreement signed April 3 regarding junk mail handling.

A July 1 telegram from P. C. Valois, the head of the post office's staff relations, said the post office intends to continue with union-opposed changes in handling junk mail.

"He's threatened us," said Findlay.

"He's a new fellow down there that feels the old brigade has been too soft on us. Well, we're sending out a bulletin today to all our members and when junk mail comes in our people will refuse to touch it.

"We'll lock up and leave."

WANT EXTRA MINUTE

Findlay said all the letter carriers want is "an extra minute a day" to sort such mail — circulars, advertising brochures and the like.

Unless the letter carriers receive this extra minute, Findlay said, "there is no way we touch these things."

He said Roger Decarie, co-chairman of the Council of Postal Unions and head of the letter carriers, had left instructions to have members walk off the job if the post office did not comply with the union-requested changes. Decarie is on a holiday in the Maritimes.

"He was so damn mad when he left he told us to

HUMAN CANCER VIRUS ISOLATED

HOUSTON, Tex. (Reuter) — American scientists announced Friday they have isolated and extracted a human cancer virus for the first time.

The development, climaxing mounting speculation that viruses play a leading role in the cause of some human cancers, was seen as opening a new front in the world-wide battle against the disease.

Isolation of the virus was announced by the M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute here.

It said a team headed by Dr. Elizabeth S. Priori and Dr. Leon Dmochowski had isolated a spherical-shaped virus known as Type C virus.

It was extracted from cells grown in tissue culture and obtained originally from a biopsy of a child with Burkitt's lymphoma. This is a cancer of the lymphatic system, frequently involving bones in the face and knees and predominantly found in African children.

Dr. Priori said: "The availability of this virus provides a tool of great potential for investigation of the role of viruses in human cancer and perhaps even for vaccination studies." Dr. R. Lee Clark, president of the Anderson Institute — one of the foremost of its kind in he world — said the research could help "expedite that day when we can define the actual role of the virus in causing some cancers."

Cosmonaut Deaths Result of Air Leak

LONDON (AP) — The Moscow correspondent of the London Evening News says the three Soviet cosmonauts died because "they failed to seal the hatch of their spacecraft properly."

The usually well-informed correspondent, Victor Louis, a Russian, says this explanation of the death of the three Soviet spacemen was put forth by Moscow scientists gathered for the state funeral.

"Human error and mechanical failure between them caused creeping depressurization in the spacemen's nine-foot cabin and deprived the astronauts of life-supporting oxygen on the final phase of their journey," Louis writes.

"As I understand it," he adds, "the spacecraft's hatchway opened slightly in the turbulence of re-entry to the earth's atmosphere—enough to suck the cosmonauts' air supply into space."

The word, says Louis, is that a design fault caused the tragedy.

The cosmonauts — Georgy Dobrovosky, Vladislav Volkov and Victor Patsayev — were laid to rest today in the Kremlin Wall, the traditional burial place for Russia's fallen heroes.

The cosmonauts were eulogized at funeral ceremonies in Red Square for their flight aboard the world's first space laboratory.

Mstislav V. Keldysh, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, told the thousands of Russians assembled in Red Square for the cosmonauts' funeral and they had "opened up vast possibilities for all mankind."

$7 Million Gift Icing On B.C. Birthday Cake

By IAN HAMILTON

It was the kind of birthday party you had to be at to appreciate.

Prime Minister Trudeau, Premier W. A. C. Bennett, 14 federal cabinet ministers and assorted provincial dignitaries led a crowd of over 3,000 spectators Thursday morning in July 1 Centennial celebrations.

The second political "who's who" in Victoria in two weeks, the affair rivalled the constitutional conference in mid-June for finger-snapping and long questioning stares as tourists and natives attempted to identify the various big-name guests.

Trudeau himself provided the icing for the provincial cake, announcing in a nationally-televised speech "gifts from the people of Canada." To wit, the dispersal of the $7 million remaining from Ottawa's $10 million Centennial grant to B.C.

A $4.5 million fund will be set up to develop natural conservation areas, called the Second Century fund of B.C., and the remaining $2.5 million will build a museum to house Indian artifacts at the University of B.C.

In keeping with the prime minister's style, there was as much informality involved in the 1½ hours of political pomp as ceremony would allow. However, the holiday air was not all devoid of loud protesting noises.

The legislative lawns contained a minority of placard-toting demonstrators who tried unsuccessfully to hold the attention of the dignitaries.

TWO FIGHTS

Two fights broke out in the crowd, one between a grey-haired stocky man and an Amchitka 2 sympathizer and the other a minor scuffle between a pair of women's lib pro-abortionists and a woman who resented either their sign or their continual yelling.

Police broke up both skirmishes easily and the various speakers appeared not to be unduly perturbed with the numerous shouts of derison on such subjects as inflation, Canadian complicity in Vietnam, seal hunting, abortion and economic independence.

Highlight of festivities was the reading of a proclamation by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson calling on "Canadians everywhere to acknowledge and join in the celebration of British Columbia on the 100th anniversary."

The first federal cabinet meeting held in B.C. preceded the reading, as Ottawa leaders signed it inside the legislative builging.

Later, with the sun break-

DOMINION DAY . . . PICTURES AND WORDS

Dominion Day meant a variety of things to Victorians depending on where they were and what they saw. A page of pictures on Page 25 shows some of the things that went on in the capital city over the holiday.

Events included Indian canoe races, presentation of flags and the start of the England-to-Victoria air competition.

Cong Propose PoW Release With Pullout

Times News Services

PARIS — A proposal advanced Thursday by the Viet Cong delegation to the deadlocked Vietnam peace talks here offered repatriation of all prisoners of war held by Hanoi, in return for complete withdrawal of United States and allied forces from Vietnam by the end of 1971.

The Pentagon Papers

Reaction in Washington to the proposal was mixed, ranging from skepticism in some quarters about the motives behind the offer, to guarded optimism that genuine progress toward peace is starting.

The official White House and state department stance is the seven-point plan contans "positive as well as clearly unacceptable elements" and will be given serious study.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird indicated that there would be little difficulty in pulling all U.S. troops out of Vietnam by the end of the year but the cost to the American taxpayer would run to billions of dollars.

CLOSE SCRUTINY

As the Nixon arministration gave close scrutiny to the proposals Laird raised this problem of returning U.S. weapons and equipment from Vietnam.

At a planeside news conference at Andrews Air Force Base before leaving on a Far East trip — with no Vietnam stop included—Laird was asked whether there would be any obstacles from the Pentagon's point of view toward physically meeting the Communist call for a total U.S. pullout this year.

He replied that this was a "very hypothetical question" because it did not deal with the matter of equipment. "Personnel can be handled, of course, in a short time," he said.

Hydro Workers Back at Job After 11th-Hour Meeting

Electrical workers were back on the job at B.C. Hydro today following an 11-day strike.

The 2,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 258, returned voluntarily following a summit meeting with Labor Minister James Chabot late Thursday night.

"Both sides have resolved their differences," Chabot said after a 3½-hour session with representatives of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

ARBITRATION

"Hydro has agreed to a third party arbitrator and the union has agreed to arbitration."

The 11th-hour turn of events came just before the midnight deadline the union faced as a result of the government invoking the act and compulsory arbitration Wednesday.

Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Court of Appeal will arbitrate the dispute, but outside the provisions of the act which has attracted almost universal opposition from provincial unions.

Mr. Chabot said Mr. Justice Nemetz will not meet with either side until after he returns from a world congress of judges conference in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 2.

"And until such time as the dispute is resolved, the conditions of the expired contract continue," said the labor minister.

HOW LONG

"I cannot even assume how long it will take him to come down with a decision after he meets with the two sides."

The dispute began with a series of spot strikes and gradually escalated. The union is seeking an 18.5-per-cent wage increase over two years on a base rate of $5.39 an hour. Hydro, a Crown corporation, has offered 14 per cent.

The activities which led to the voluntary return-to-work agreement started Wednesday with the provincial government ordering both sides back to work under the act "to protect the public interest and welfare." The government's order-in-council also named Mr. Justice Nemetz as sole arbitrator.

BINDING

He was to make a recommendation for a contract and if both sides didn't accept it, or agree to change it, the contract would have been made binding by the B.C. Mediation Commission.

NEMETZ
all up to him

Mr. Justice Nemetz wired Mr. Chabot that he was ready to accept the post as arbitrator and listed three problem areas.

He said he was not prepared to make a contract recommendation which could be refused, he would not participate as arbitrator unless both sides agreed to have him and he could not take the job until he returned from the judges' conference in Europe.

"I'm leaving town in the morning and I certainly don't want to sound as if I rebuffed anyone," said Mr. Justice Nemetz Thursday night.

Hijacked Jet Mexico-Bound

DALLAS (UPI) — A Braniff International 707 jet with 110 persons aboard was hijacked today by a heavily armed man and woman and diverted from its Texas destination to Monterrey, Mexico.

The plane was Braniff's flight 14, originating in Acapulco, with stops in Mexico City, San Antonio, Dallas, Washington and New York. It was hijacked after it left Mexico City.

VICTORIA PILOT FIRST ACROSS

Victoria businssman Claude Butler, leading the field into Quebec City on the first lap of the London-Victoria Air Race, said today he "doesn't have a chance at the prize money."

Butler, 59, is flying a twin-turboprop Aerostar with four of its six seats removed to allow more space for fuel tanks. He was first off the tarmac at Abingdon airfield near London Thursday, and retained his lead into Quebec City, end of the first major leg of the $170,000 race.

His pessimism about prize-money chances is based on the fact that his speedy Aerostar is laboring under a stiff handicap compared with smaller, slower aircraft in the race.

Co-pilot is Harold Aasen of Delta, B.C., manager of a Butler store in Whalley.

An exhausted Butler called his wife at their home at 1781 Verling at 3:30 a.m. Victoria time today to report his safe arrival. He was whisked to hotel by race officials to rest up for take-off July 4, when crews of slower planes will have arrived and rested for the next lap.

"I was terribly worried while he was over the Atlantic," Mrs. Butler said. "I'm not worried any longer. While they're over Canada there's nothing to worry about."

Weather was rough and unpredictable over the North Atlantic, and icing was blamed for downing one plane off the coast of Greenland.

Butler said before takeoff he thought it might be possible to fly around any bad weather encountered.

"It's part of the contest," Butler said. "The crew that adjusts best to bad conditions is the one that will manage the best speed."

ROLL TO VICTORIA

When his plane appeared slow to leave the runway at Abingdon, one burly matron among the 50-or-so spectators on the sun-drenched tarmac was heard to remark: "Migawd, that plane is going to roll to Victoria."

TWO CANADIANS RESCUED, BAD WEATHER PREVAILS

Mutiny, Crash Spice Air Race

A plane with two men aboard went down in the Atlantic and a co-pilot mutinied, kicked out his pilot and flew on alone in the opening stages of the London-Victoria Air Race today.

The downed plane hit an ice floe about 10 miles off the southwestern coast of Greenland. Rescue officials said the men were picked up by one of two Danish helicopters taking part in a rescue-operation cover for the race.

The plane, designed as a single-engine Viking 300, carried W. F. Sneider of Brampton, Ont., and P. R. Gilmore of Toronto.

Rescue operations were conducted from "somewhere in Greenland," the officials said.

Canada Celebrates Birthday, page 27

The mutiny occurred when two Americans had a fight in mid-air Thursday night. When the smoke had cleared, the co-pilot was flying on alone and the pilot and owner of the aircraft was in hospital in Scotland recovering from cuts and bruises.

The injured man, Dr. Lawrence Dennis, a 56-year-old osteopath from Milwaukee, Ore., told police he and pilot Roger Flanagan of Canby, Ore., tangled in midair when Dennis insisted they turn back for repairs.

The plane, a four-seat Mooney Ranger, landed at Prestwick and "there was an incident on the tarmac," police said, "Dr. Dennis was left lying on the ground bleeding from a face injury.

"His co-pilot went to the aircraft, which immediately took off again."

Dr. Dennis was not seriously injured.

The plane passed through Reykjavik, Iceland, early today and headed for Greenland. Officials of the race in London said the plane might be disqualified if flown solo but that was up to headquarters in Canada.

Police said Dennis is co-owner of the aircraft with another doctor.

Dennis told reporters he paid $5,000 to finance his attempt to win the $170,000 race, including a fee to his co-pilot. "I had to have someone along with instrument-flying experience," he said.

Hannagan, 22, is a flying instructor at the airport where Dennis usually keeps his plane.

"After taking off from Prestwick, we realized a door was not shut properly," Dennis said.

"Hannagan tried to shut it without success. I wanted to turn back but he disagreed, saying we would lose valuable time.

"There was quite a skir-

Speeches, Parties, Parades—The Usual Centennial Fare

By Canadian Press

For most Canadians Dominion Day passed Thursday as just another summer holiday marked by speeches, parties and parades.

And for those who didn't want to celebrate the country's 104th anniversary at home, the resorts and summer cottages beckoned, amid the usual warnings about possible road deaths and drownings.

In Toronto, there were five-cent hot dogs to be had at a provincial government picnic held at midtown Queen's Park, seat of the legislature, while in Ottawa music and sport shared the spotlight with a military parade marking the 100th year of Canada's regular armed forces.

In Montreal several thousand placard-carrying youths demonstrated against Confederation and for Quebec independence with their own July 1 parade.

While Dominion Day celebrations were taking part in other areas of the city, the youths carried banners that read "Down with Confederation," "Quebec—our only country," "English Quebecois for a free and independent Quebec" and "Confederation—104 years of injustice."

The crowd, made up of various separatist and socialist groups and thousand of spectators, carried red, white and green flags of the Quebec "patriots" of 1837. Many youths wore shirts of the same color.

Hundreds of police stood by during the three-hour affair but there was no violence, as the crowd was in a festive mood despite the hot, muggy weather.

Later when organizers asked for all flags and banners to be removed so the crowd would not be charged with holding an illegal demonstration after the parade permit expired, a young woman clad only in a patriot flag and panties delighted the crowd by complying with the request.

In Ottawa about 20,000 people attended a 700-man display of music, marching, artillery drills and flypasts staged by the Canadian Forces and marking their anniversary as well as the country's.

The other major event came in the evening when the bells of the Peace Tower began an open-air variety show featuring choirs and bands from across the country.

Governor-General Roland Michener, who opened the military display in the morning, welcomed Ottawa school children to a garden party in the afternoon. Highland dancing, judo, karate, fencing and a circus were the fare for the youngsters.

In the Atlantic provinces, Dominion Day celebrations in Newcastle, N.B., were highlighted by a visit to the town by Adolph Schmidt, United States ambassador to Canada.

In Campbellton, N.B., Premier Richard Hatfield opened the town's fifth annual salmon festival.

The counterpart to Dominion Day celebrations in Newfoundland will be observed Monday.

July 1 is a time of mourning in the province for the men of the Newfoundland Regiment who died at Beaumont Hamel in northern France during the First World War.

Turkey Imposes Opium Ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government of Turkey, supplier of half the world supply of raw opium and 60 per cent of the illicit heroin in the United States, has announced a total ban on growth of poppies and production of opium by the fall of 1972.

The announcement in Ankara, climaxing a decade of negotiations with the United States, was hailed by President Nixon as a "statesmanlike and courageous" act and a "significant breakthrough" in efforts to control heroin addiction world-wide.

Secretary of State William Rogers said the United States would compensate an estimated 75,000 peasant families and the state for their losses in abandoning Turkey's centuries-old cultivation of opium poppies, from which heroin is derived.

Rogers said no decision had been made on the amount of U.S. assistance in the changeover to other crops, but he estimated that Turkey's opium trade is valued at $3 million to $5 millian a year.

The decision of the Turkish council of ministers, announced in the official gazette, said the ban would go into effect this fall in three of the seven provinces still growing poppies and would be extended to the other four next year. Opium cultivation was the economic mainstay of 42 provinces as recently as 1960.

"All opium cultivation and production throughout Turkey will be banned by the end of the fall, 1972, definitely and totally," the government said.

Nixon appeared with Rogers and Turkish ambassador Melih Esenbel in the White House press room, after a meeting in his office, and said Turkey's decision would be "a significant contribution to the well-being of the world."

8 CARDS OF THANKS

MR. EVANS

I wish to gratefully acknowledge your assistance to my wife Mrs. Gibb who was in difficulty today, June 29, at Yates and Douglas. Your kind assistance will always be remembered.

9 IN MEMORIAM

JONES—John. In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away July 2, 1970.

We watched you suffer and heard your sighs,
But all we could do was just stand by.
For when the time came we suffered too.
You never deserved what you went through.
God took your hands and we had to part,
He eased your pains but broke our hearts,
Although we smile and seem carefree,
Nobody misses you more than we.

—Sadly missed by his wife Elizabeth, son Trefor and daughter-in-law Marjorie.

Junk Mail Row Erupts

Postmen Threaten Walkout

OTTAWA (CP) — Leaders of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada were meeting with post office officials this afternoon to try to prevent a dispute about delivery of "junk" or third-class mail from erupting into a national walkout.

Jim Mayes, first vice-president of the union, said in an interview today that he will ask postal officials to delay imposing new delivery regulations until he can meet Deputy Postmaster-General J. A. H. Mackay next week.

He said that if the post office goes ahead with its plans to reorganize the delivery system for "dear householder" mail, "we can't be responsible for the reaction of the membership."

Earlier, a union spokesman said a bulletin will go out to all of the 12,000 union members today advising them to "lock up and leave" if they are forced to conform to the post office proposals.

William Findlay, second vice-president of the letter carriers, said in an interview the post office had breached an agreement signed April 3 regarding junk mail handling.

A July 1 telegram from P. C. Valois, the head of the post office's staff relations, said the post office intends to continue with union-opposed changes in handling junk mail.

"He's threatened us," said Findlay.

"He's a new fellow down there that feels the old brigade has been too soft on us. Well, we're sending out a bulletin today to all our members and when junk mail comes in our people will refuse to touch it.

"We'll lock up and leave."

WANT EXTRA MINUTE

Findlay said all the letter carriers want is "an extra minute a day" to sort such mail — circulars, advertising brochures and the like.

Unless the letter carriers receive this extra minute, Findlay said, "there is no way we touch these things."

He said Roger Decarie, co-chairman of the Council of Postal Unions and head of the letter carriers, had left instructions to have members walk off the job if the post office did not comply with the union-requested changes. Decarie is on a holiday in the Maritimes.

"He was so damn mad when he left he told us to

HUMAN CANCER VIRUS ISOLATED

HOUSTON, Tex. (Reuter) — American scientists announced Friday they have isolated and extracted a human cancer virus for the first time.

The development, climaxing mounting speculation that viruses play a leading role in the cause of some human cancers, was seen as opening a new front in the world-wide battle against the disease.

Isolation of the virus was announced by the M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute here.

It said a team headed by Dr. Elizabeth S. Priori and Dr. Leon Dmochowski had isolated a spherical-shaped virus known as Type C virus.

It was extracted from cells grown in tissue culture and obtained originally from a biopsy of a child with Burkitt's lymphoma. This is a cancer of the lymphatic system, frequently involving bones in the face and knees and predominantly found in African children.

Dr. Priori said: "The availability of this virus provides a tool of great potential for investigation of the role of viruses in human cancer and perhaps even for vaccination studies." Dr. R. Lee Clark, president of the Anderson Institute — one of the foremost of its kind in he world — said the research could help "expedite that day when we can define the actual role of the virus in causing some cancers."

$7 Million Gift Icing On B.C. Birthday Cake

By IAN HAMILTON

It was the kind of birthday party you had to be at to appreciate.

Prime Minister Trudeau, Premier W. A. C. Bennett, 14 federal cabinet ministers and assorted provincial dignitaries led a crowd of over 3,000 spectators Thursday morning in July 1 Centennial celebrations.

The second political "who's who" in Victoria in two weeks, the affair rivalled the constitutional conference in mid-June for finger-snapping and long questioning stares as tourists and natives attempted to identify the various big-name guests.

Trueadu himself provided the icing for the provincial cake, announcing in a nationally-televised speech "gifts from the people of Canada." To wit, the dispersal of the $7 million remaining from Ottawa's $10 million Centennial grant to B.C.

A $4.5 million fund will be set up to develop natural conservation areas, called the Second Century fund of B.C., and the remaining $2.5 million will build a museum to house Indian artifacts at the University of B.C.

In keeping with the prime minister's style, there was as much informality involved in the 1½ hours of political pomp as ceremony would allow. However, the holiday air was not all devoid of loud protesting noises.

The legislative lawns contained a minority of placard-toting demonstrators who tried unsuccessfully to hold the attention of the dignitaries.

TWO FIGHTS

Two fights broke out in the crowd, one between a grey-haired stocky man and an Amchitka 2 sympathizer and the other a minor scuffle between a pair of women's lib pro-abortionists and a woman who resented either their sign or their continual yelling.

Police broke up both skirmishes easily and the various speakers appeared not to be unduly perturbed with the numerous shouts of derison on such subjects as inflation, Canadian complicity in Vietnam, seal hunting, abortion and economic independence.

Highlight of festivities was the reading of a proclamation by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson calling on "Canadians everywhere to acknowledge and join in the celebration of British Columbia on the 100th anniversary."

The first federal cabinet meeting held in B.C. preceded the reading, as Ottawa leaders signed it inside the legislative builging.

Later, with the sun break-

DOMINION DAY . . . PICTURES AND WORDS

Dominion Day meant a variety of things to Victorians depending on where they were and what they saw. A page of pictures on Page 25 shows some of the things that went on in the capital city over the holiday.

Events included Indian canoe races, presentation of flags and the start of the England-to-Victoria air competition.

Hydro Workers Back at Job After 11th-Hour Meeting

Electrical workers were back on the job at B.C. Hydro today following an 11-day strike.

The 2,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 258, returned voluntarily following a summit meeting with Labor Minister James Chabot late Thursday night.

"Both sides have resolved their differences," Chabot said after a 3½-hour session with representatives of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

ARBITRATION

"Hydro has agreed to a third party arbitrator and the union has agreed to arbitration."

The 11th-hour turn of events came just before the midnight deadline the union faced as a result of the government invoking the act and compulsory arbitration Wednesday.

Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Court of Appeal will arbitrate the dispute, but outside the provisions of the act which has attracted almost universal opposition from provincial unions.

Mr. Chabot said Mr. Justice Nemetz will not meet with either side until after he returns from a world congress of judges conference in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 2.

"And until such time as the dispute is resolved, the conditions of the expired contract continue," said the labor minister.

HOW LONG

"I cannot even assume how long it will take him to come down with a decision after he meets with the two sides."

The dispute began with a series of spot strikes and gradually escalated. The union is seeking an 18.5-per-cent wage increase over two years on a base rate of $5.39 an hour. Hydro, a Crown corporation, has offered 14 per cent.

The activities which led to the voluntary return-to-work agreement started Wednesday with the provincial government ordering both sides back to work under the act "to protect the public interest and welfare." The government's order-in-council also named Mr. Justice Nemetz as sole arbitrator.

BINDING

He was to make a recommendation for a contract and if both sides didn't accept it, or agree to change it, the contract would have been made binding by the B.C. Mediation Commission.

Mr. Justice Nemetz wired Mr. Chabot that he was ready to accept the post as arbitrator and listed three problem areas.

He said he was not prepared to make a contract recommendation which could be refused, he would not participate as arbitrator unless both sides agreed to have him and he could not take the job until he returned from the judges' conference in Europe.

"I'm leaving town in the morning and I certainly don't want to sound as if I rebuffed anyone," said Mr. Justice Nemetz Thursday night.

Hijacked Jet Mexico-Bound

DALLAS (UPI) — A Braniff International 707 jet with 110 persons aboard was hijacked today by a heavily armed man and woman and diverted from its Texas destination to Monterrey, Mexico.

The plane was Braniff's flight 14, originating in Acapulco, with stops in Mexico City, San Antonio, Dallas, Washington and New York. It was hijacked after it left Mexico City.

Cosmonaut Deaths Result of Air Leak

LONDON (AP) — The Moscow correspondent of the London Evening News says the three Soviet cosmonauts died because "they failed to seal the hatch of their spacecraft properly."

The usually well-informed correspondent, Victor Louis, a Russian, says this explanation of the death of the three Soviet spacemen was put forth by Moscow scientists gathered for the state funeral.

"Human error and mechanical failure between them caused creeping depressurization in the spacemen's nine-foot cabin and deprived the astronauts of life-supporting oxygen on the final phase of their journey," Louis writes.

"As I understand it," he adds, "the spacecraft's hatchway opened slightly in the turbulence of re-entry to the earth's atmosphere—enough to suck the cosmonauts' air supply into space."

The word, says Louis, is that a design fault caused the tragedy.

The cosmonauts — Georgy Dobrovosky, Vladislav Volkov and Victor Patsayev — were laid to rest today in the Kremlin Wall, the traditional burial place for Russia's fallen heroes.

The cosmonauts were eulogized at funeral ceremonies in Red Square for their flight aboard the world's first space laboratory.

Mstislav V. Keldysh, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, told the thousands of Russians assembled in Red Square for the cosmonauts' funeral and they had "opened up vast possibilities for all mankind."

Cong Propose PoW Release With Pullout

Times News Services

PARIS — A proposal advanced Thursday by the Viet Cong delegation to the deadlocked Vietnam peace talks here offered repatriation of all prisoners of war held by Hanoi, in return for complete withdrawal of United States and allied forces from Vietnam by the end of 1971.

Reaction in Washington to the proposal was mixed, ranging from skepticism in some quarters about the motives behind the offer, to guarded optimism that genuine progress toward peace is starting.

The official White House and state department stance is the seven-point plan contains "positive as well as clearly unacceptable elements" and will be given serious study.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird indicated that there would be little difficulty in pulling all U.S. troops out of Vietnam by the end of the year but the cost to the American taxpayer would run to billions of dollars.

CLOSE SCRUTINY

As the Nixon administration gave close scrutiny to the proposals, Laird raised the problem of returning U.S. weapons and equipment from Vietnam.

At a planeside news conference at Andrews Air Force Base before leaving on a Far East trip — with no Vietnam stop included — Laird was asked whether there would be any obstacles from the Pentagon's point of view toward physically meeting the Communist call for a total U.S. pullout this year.

He replied that this was a "very hypothetical question" because it did not deal with the matter of equipment. "Personnel can be handled, of course, in a short time," he said.

VICTORIA PILOT FIRST ACROSS

Victoria businessman Claude Butler, leading the field into Quebec City on the first lap of the London-Victoria Air Race, said today he "doesn't have a chance at the prize money."

Butler, 59, is flying a twin-turboprop Aerostar with four of its six seats removed to allow more space for fuel tanks. He was first off the tarmac at Abingdon airfield near London Thursday, and retained his lead into Quebec City, end of the first major leg of the $170,000 race.

His pessimism about prize-money chances is based on the fact that his speedy Aerostar is laboring under a stiff handicap compared with smaller, slower aircraft in the race.

Co-pilot is Harold Aasen of Delta, B.C., manager of a Butler store in Whalley.

An exhausted Butler called his wife at their home at 1781 Verling at 3:30 a.m. Victoria time today to report his safe arrival. He was whisked to hotel by race officials to rest up for take-off July 4, when crews of slower planes will have arrived and rested for the next lap.

"I was terribly worried while he was over the Atlantic," Mrs. Butler said. "I'm not worried any longer. While they're over Canada there's nothing to worry about."

Weather was rough and unpredictable over the North Atlantic, and icing was blamed for downing one plane off the coast of Greenland.

Butler said before takeoff he thought it might be possible to fly around any bad weather encountered.

"It's part of the contest," Butler said. "The crew that adjusts best to bad conditions is the one that will manage the best speed."

ROLL TO VICTORIA

When his plane appeared slow to leave the runway at Abingdon, one burly matron among the 50-or-so spectators on the sun-drenched tarmac was heard to remark: "Migawd, that plane is going to roll to Victoria."

TWO CANADIANS RESCUED, BAD WEATHER PREVAILS

Mutiny, Crash Spice Air Race

A plane with two men aboard went down in the Atlantic and a co-pilot mutinied, kicked out his pilot and flew on alone in the opening stages of the London-Victoria Air Race today.

The downed plane hit an ice floe about 10 miles off the southwestern coast of Greenland. Rescue officials said the men were picked up by one of two Danish helicopters taking part in a rescue-operation cover for the race.

The plane, designed as a single-engine Viking 300, carried W. F. Sneider of Brampton, Ont., and P. R. Gilmore of Toronto.

Rescue operations were conducted from "somewhere in Greenland," the officials said.

Canada Celebrates Birthday, page 27

The mutiny occurred when two Americans had a fight in mid-air Thursday night. When the smoke had cleared, the co-pilot was flying on alone and the pilot and owner of the aircraft was in hospital in Scotland recovering from cuts and bruises.

The injured man, Dr. Lawrence Dennis, a 56-year-old osteopath from Milwaukee, Ore., told police he and pilot Roger Flanagan of Canby, Ore., tangled in midair when Dennis insisted they turn back for repairs.

The plane, a four-seat Mooney Ranger, landed at Prestwick and "there was an incident on the tarmac," police said. "Dr Dennis was left lying on the ground bleeding from a face injury.

"His co-pilot went to the aircraft, which immediately took off again."

Dr. Dennis was not seriously injured.

The plane passed through Reykjavik, Iceland, early today and headed for Greenland. Officials of the race in London said the plane might be disqualified if flown solo but that was up to headquarters in Canada.

Police said Dennis is co-owner of the aircraft with another doctor.

Dennis told reporters he paid $5,000 to finance his attempt to win the $170,000 race, including a fee to his co-pilot. "I had to have someone along with instrument-flying experience," he said.

Hannagan, 22, is a flying instructor at the airport where Dennis usually keeps his plane.

"After taking off from Prestwick, we realized a door was not shut properly," Dennis said.

"Hannagan tried to shut it without success. I wanted to turn back but he disagreed, saying we would lose valuable time.

"There was quite a skir-

ing out through slightly overcast skies and disproving the weatherman's rain forecast, Bennett and Trudeau picked up special telephones for a trans-Atlantic connection with Abingdon airport in London to start the B.C. Centennial London, England to Victoria air race.

Canada's High Commissioner in London, Charles Richie, fired a Very pistol on their command after a two-man countdown.

". . 5 . . 4 . . 3 . . 2 . . 1 Bang," said the Prime Minister, cocking his finger as the crowd laughed "Can you hear the plane running down the runway?"

PLANE OVERHEAD

With the intercom system turned on a plane flying overhead at the same time toting a sign which read "Dance with me tonigst, Pierre, at the Old Forge," many weren't sure which craft they were hearing but Premier Bennett said "Yes, it's running down the runway now."

Victoria businessmen Claude Butler, 59, was the first pilot off the mark in a two-engined craft. Harold Aason of Vancouver is his navigator.

With 63 aircraft of all shapes and sizes taking part, Bennett pointed out that millions of Canadians will be able to see the flyers as they cross the country until the race ends July 7.

The day's affairs began earlier in the lobby of the Empress as Prime Minister Trudeau presented seven Canadian flags, six to student president represenatives from the six Greater Victoria Senior Secondary schools and one to Dr. Carron Jameson, trustee on the school board.

FLAGS FLY

The flags had flown from the Peace Tower in Ottawa and will now fly from the masts of the various schools involved.

After the air race start, the dignitaries stepped off their seats in the makeshift stand proceeded by three Tally-Ho horse-drawn wagons to the Inner Harbor where Trudeau boarded the SS Beaver and started an Indian war canoe race by setting off a cannon.

TWO CANOES

Six canoes were scheduled to race but only two showed up.

The event was won by a team called St. George, from Tsartlip Reserve on Brentwood Bay over St. Patrick's from Malahat.

In keeping with the mood of the day, the "Trudeau-Bennett trophy" was presented to winning skipper Manny Cooper.

After the program, Trudeau flew on to Kelowna for the start of a two-day tour of the B.C. interior. Most of the rest of the federal cabinet were scheduled to fly back to Ottawa on Thursday.

Mainland Ship Hirings Disturb Victoria Men

Victoria men aboard the three federal department of transport cutters Ready, Racer and Rider, are uneasy about developments that have resulted in crew replacements being hired from Vancouver.

They see the policy as one that discriminates against Victoria applicants.

As one man puts it: "It's tough enough as it is for university students to get a job here for the summer.

"All the replacements are hired from Canada Manpower. When you tell them that they have to go to Vancouver for an interview they quite rightly say it is too expensive to spend that kind of money on an offchance that they may be lucky."

PROTECTION CUT

"There are so few non-military ships here now—this really cuts down their chances."

Crewmen aboard the cutters are also concerned that the two-week crew changes, now being carried out here, may be done on the mainland in the future.

This, they say, would further reduce the protection given boaters in this area.

"When we're here for a crew change that's at least two days that the ship is available for marine rescues if she's needed. Even when we're in port here we're at standby and can be out on the job in 30 minutes."

Reginal district marine superintendent Herb Buchanan of Vancouver does not rule out the possibility there may be a switch to more control from the mainland.

Buchanan said all three cutters have their official base at Kitsilano, as do the two rescue crash boats, Mallard and Moorhen, and the coastguard hovercraft.

He said officer applicants are still being interviewed in Victoria but is not sure what the situation is in hiring seamen.

"All the men employed on shore at the base are from Vancouver, which is fair enough. Whether the men now being taken on are all from Vancouver—this I'm not sure about.

"But if it's a question of efficiency — of spending as little of the taxpayer's money as possible—it's quite possible they are."

Buchanan, who says the department is spending $1½ million on coast guard facilities on the west coast (this includes the three lifeboat stations) said the cutter crews have no reason to fear for their jobs.

"There will be no lay-offs and nobody will be asked to switch his home from Victoria to Vancouver."

But he admitted the men have reason to be uneasy—"It's a matter of concern—that's quite true."

mish on board. He threw a punch at me."

Dennis said Hannagan finally turned back to Prestwick and secured the door. An argument broke out again.

"I wanted to call in the mechanics to examine the door," Dennis said. "I tried to grab the aircraft keys. Instead I took a hammering and was left on the ground. Hnanagan jumped back in the aircraft and took off without me."

CRUCIAL BRIEFING

The competition, started from Victoria by Prime Minister Trudeau and Premier Bennett using a transatlantic telephone link, is part of the B.C. centennial celebrations.

Pilots and crews were called together less than an hour before the starting time at 1:33 p.m. EDT for a crucial briefing on the unfavorable weather forecasts.

They listened quietly, as RAF officials described turbulence over Scotland, the North Atlantic and Iceland. The flyers then broke the tension with a round of applause and shouts of "have the beer ready in Quebec."

Quebec City is the first assembly point for all aircraft after the Atlantic leg of the race. Most planned to touch down in Scotland, Iceland and Goose Bay, Nfld., before reaching Quebec.

Trudeau, who spoke to the pilots through a microphone connected to the telephone system, said the race will pay tribute to the many bush pilots who have played a large part in the development of British Columbia.

At the end of a countdown by Trudeau and Bennett, Canadian High Commissioner Charles Ritchie fired a starting gun and Victoria businessman Claude Butler, with his co-pilot C. H. Aasen of Vancouver, began takeoff.

PLANES HAVE HANDICAP

Each aircraft, from small, single-engined planes to fast jets, has been given a handicap based on its known cruising speed. The winner of the $50,000 first prize will be the pilot who most exceeds his handicap.

The second aircraft to leave was a single-engined plane piloted by Douglas Ireland, 45, of Mission City, B.C.

A Canadian Pacific Airlines pilot who has been flying 32 years, Ireland said North Atlantic crossings in small aircraft are always tricky, "but this crossing could be one of the toughest."

close it up if they (the post office) went ahead."

Findlay said the letter carriers could easily leave their jobs within a day or two if their demands were not met.

But "if they would give us one more minute a day we could fix this thing up."

In Victoria, the post office said this morning there was no walkout by local postmen. Saturdays and Sundays are days off for them.

The problems regarding third-class or what postmen generally call junk mail arose from a change in rules agreed on during a long post office-union consultation session that ended April 3.

On May 31, the new rules were set out. They asked companies sending out their third-class mail to bundle it in batches of 20, 25 or 50 pieces, Mr. Findlay said.

The post office agreed to deliver such mail within three days if it came bundled. Letter carriers previously had six days to sort and deliver unbundled mail.

The union accepted the three-day delivery time for the bundled mail because it was faster to handle. But companies using bulk mail were displeased because exact numbers were to be put into bundles.

UNION REQUEST

Mr. Valois told the letter carries in his telegram July 1 that because of "increasing customer dissatisfaction and a potential loss of business the restrictions on householder bundling will be changed immediately to require a reasonable size bundle without specific reference to the number of householders in each bundle."

The telegram rejected the letter carrier's request for an extra minute a day to sort and bundle the third-class mail.

A spokesman for the post office said today that to grant an extra minute a day for each householder mailing would cost the post office about $200,000 a year—"this on top of our $114 million deficit." Householder mail is sent to every household and bears no address.

. . . BUTLER

The Aerostar was made unwieldly by the abnormally high fuel load aboard, in the passenger section as well as in regular and auxiliary tanks.

Mrs. Butler said the Aerostar's elapsed time from Abingdon to Quebec City was 15 hours 40 minutes. Butler reported no problems refuelling at Iceland and Goose Bay, Labrador.

The plane made the tricky Atlantic crossing at 28,000 feet, into a 30-knot headwind. Co-pilot Aasen, a former RCAF pilot, called the weather "pretty dirty."

Race officials said it was unlikely Butler would be first away from Quebec City. His post position at Abingdon was "mostly symbolic," a spokesman said, because a B.C. plane was wanted as the lead-off entry.

Sunday, Butler's plane probably will be moved back in the starting line-up to allow the slower aircraft a head start.

Stagecoach Relives Past

The old Barkerville stage made it right on schedule — 14 days from Lytton to the steps of the legislative buildings in Victoria with 84-year-old Les Leighton at the reins.

For Leighton, one of the last drivers on the line which carried mail from 1372 to 1923 in the Cariboo country, it was a return to the past he loved, and the best part of the British Columbia centennial celebrations.

About 1,000 people were on hand when the stage drew up outside the legislature Wednesday and Laurie Wallace, deputy provincial secretary, picked up the mail.

"Nothing's changed," said Leighton. "If I had my life to live over again, it'd be the same for me."

Of course, the traffic is different. Leighton and Bill Shannon kept their team of four hourses off the highway as much as possible.

"Too damn many cars," said Leighton, "so we hit the side roads.

"Sometimes we had to go on (the highway) and some of the cars that shot past scared the horses."

Pleasure Boat In Trouble

An unidentified pleasure craft with four men aboard ran out of gas in rough waters off Dallas Thursday afternoon and was towed to safety in a small cove south of Shoal Bay.

Mrs. B. M. Hall, 1659 Hollywood, spotted the boat and contacted the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre.

They alerted the minesweeper HMCS Chignecto that was in the area but by the time she reached the scene the men and their boat had been towed into shelter by a smaller passing boat, powered by an outboard.

Stray Feathers

By HAROLD HOSFORD

The age of chivalry is not dead: It still lives in the hearts of all upstanding male double-crested cormorants!

Double-crested whats!

Double-crested cormorants, those silent, sombre, black apparitions that spend much of the year solemnly festooning our pilings, piers, rocks, lighthouses and buoys like conventions of unemployed morticians.

One look at them on a grey winter day and you'd swear that chivalry was as dead as a dodo, as far as cormorants were concerned.

But come spring, on distant islands and the waters that surround these islands, the male cormorant's fancy, like any other young swain, turns to thoughts of . . .

Having sought and found a mate, selected a nesting site, and settled down to the daily routine of family life, those silent winter watchers become the epitome of chivalrous courtliness as they solicitously attend their mates.

It's a ludicrous performance to human eyes — no more ludicrous I suppose than our own displays at courting time — but one which seals a bond between two birds essential for survival.

Chivalry, in cormorant circles, means periodic relief of your spouse from the drugery of incubation; bringing her selected building material such as twigs or bits of seaweed which she carefully adds to the nest; or just roosting nearby, mostly silent but occasionally engaging in quiet conversation while she incubates.

Exchanges at the nest are carried out to the accompaniment of a highly ritualized performance which often includes head bobbing, weaving and entwining of necks, twig passing and various grunts and gurgles all designed to assure each bird of the strength of their bond.

In the rough and tumble of any well-organized cormorant community space is always at a premium. The choice nest sites, those in the centre of the colony, go first, often to the oldest and most experienced birds. The farther down the line of command you are, the farther from the centre you live.

There's method in this madness. The centre sites are the safest. The ones near the edge, most prone to attack from predators. So, the young, and apparently unsophisticated, must make do on the frontier, so to speak.

But no matter your station in life, you defend your territory from all intruders, at least in the beginning. Here chivalry comes to the fore again as males stand solidly by their mates when other cormorants stray into the territory. Intimidation is usually enough to drive off most interlopers. There is seldom need for physical violence.

But the crowding does create problems in law and order. The crime rate increases in direct proportion to the distance between the nests. And pilfering leads the list of crimes. With most nests no more than two cormorant neck-lengths apart, and with good nest-building material at a premium, the name of the game becomes steal from your neighbor that which you have been unable to find elsewhere.

Most of this takes place in the early days of each nesting season. Once the young are born and develop enough to wander, territorial boundaries weaken and lose their importance.

Chivalrous blood runs a little thin though when a serious threat appears before the colony's gates, a threat such as man. Then, with the apparent knowledge that the paths of glory lead but to the grave, every able-bodied cormorant abandons the field of battle.

This seemingly callous disregard for the safety of their nests and young has important survival value. Cormorants are ungainly on land, almost helpless, and could do little to repel a determined invader. Here the laws of chivalry give way to natural laws which say only healthy adult cormorants are worth saving. Young helpless cormorants would die anyway without their parents.

Despite being beset by danger on all sides, cormorants do raise young, young that only a mother cormorant would love. As grotesque, naked nestlings which must be carefully nurtured through the first six weeks of life, they occupy the full time of both parents. Once again our dutiful male cormorant assumes his parental responsibilities with all the enthusiasm of his earlier approaches to his new mate.

Students of bird behavior will tell you he does this not from any sense of responsibility, least of all chivalry. He does it because he is programmed to do it. He can't help it.

A few hours in a blind near a cormorant's nest leaves me with a distinctly different feeling.

DOUBLE-CRESTED CORMORANT watches, with apparent pride, while his mate adds his latest contribution, a weathered twig, to their nest foundation.

No Reasons Need Be Given For Refusal—Partridge

Nothing in the University of Victoria tenure document says the president has to disclose to a faculty member the reasons he has been denied tenure or promotion.

For this stated reason Uvic president Bruce Partridge never disclosed to philosophy lecturer J. P. Graff why it was decided he could not be promoted to senior lecturer, despite repeated requests for the information.

And for the same reason Partridge declined to tell Dr. William Goede of the English department why he could not be granted tenure.

This use of the tenure document emerged from correspondence between Partridge and Goede and Graff at Wednesday's hearing into the Uvic tenure and promotion dispute.

Partridge termed "legalistic" the claim by the two teachers they had a right according to the tenure document to know the reasons on which the judgments against them were based.

Graff's application for promotion was approved unanimously by members of the philosophy department. It was also approved at the next level by an advisory committee of the faculty of arts and sciences.

However, dean of arts and sciences Dr. John Climenhaga overturned the recommendation for promotion, and Partridge upheld the dean's actions.

At Wednesday's hearing Climenhaga was asked by lawyer David Williams what criteria he had used to make his decision on Graff.

He said he based his decision on "evidence of being an active scholar," which he defined as attending faculty meetings, publication and completion of the PhD.

"My feeling at that time was that he had given up the idea of pursuing it" (PhD), Climenhaga said.

"He questioned wether pursuing a PhD, publishing, etcetera, really did add to teaching effectiveness."

Climenhaga said he reconsidered the Graff case in the light of a statement by Graff that he expected to complete his PsD by June, 1972.

LITTLE INDICATION

"I felt the statement did not give too much indication as to length of time. If I could have had some indication from his department at

More Uvic Stories On Pages 9, 30

Berkeley, this would have given me some concrete evidence."

Climenhaga said letters from several students and director of admissions Ronald Jeffels attesting to Graff's ability as a teacher did not influence his decision because he agreed Graff was a good teacher.

He was asked why he did not communicate his decision to Graff, and this was his reply:

"When I took office this tenure document had just come in, and there was great concern on the part of everyone concerned that this document should not be departed from.

INTERPRETATION

"The interpretation was that there was intent that this was not to be done."

The Graff case came up again during the afternoon session of Wednesday's hearing when Partridge appeared before the investigating panel.

Partridge informed Graff in a letter dated May 19, 1970, that he was not to be promoted.

Graff wrote to the president asking for the reasons (so that he could appeal the decision) and what the recommendation from the dean had been.

"In my case a recommendation against promotion is a recommendation against renewal of my contract," Graff wrote.

EXCHANGE

There followed an exchange of correspondence between Graff and Partridge in which the president repeatedly cited the tenure document provisions under which he did not have to give his reasons.

Graff said the document did not constrain him from doing so, and added making available the reasons was really a matter of common courtesy.

"Whether or not the tenure document obliges you to give reasons is a red herring," he said in one letter.

MEETING OFFER

Partridge finally offered to meet Graff and Dr. Kenneth Rankin, chairman of the philosophy department. Graff replied he wanted reasons, not therapy.

In the Goede case, both Climenhaga and Partridge said the decision not to grant tenure was based on what they contend was a considerable negative vote at the departmental and faculty level.

The first time Goede's application for tenure came before the English department's appointments committee all eight members abstained from voting.

UP AGAIN

Shortly afterward the composition of the committee was changed, and when the Goede case came up again the committee voted 5-1 with two abstentions to recommend he get tenure.

The faculty advisory committee also recommended tenure in a 6-3 preliminary vote and a 5-3 final vote.

Partridge referred to the votes as "split" and "marginal," and implied since they were not unanimous there must have been considerable uncertainty about Goede's record.

The Need Is Mounting

COWICHAN VALLEY REgional district voters this week approved by 93.4 per cent a $1.6 million bylaw to build an extended care hospital. Spurred by this enthusiastic response, the planning committee hopes to have BCHIS approval quickly so that tenders can be called by October.

In view of the urgent need for hospitals throughout this province, we should hope that Cowichan will have a better experience than the Capital Regional District whose people in 1968 overwhelmingly voted $9.3 million for an extended care hospital building program and haven't seen a new bed yet, although construction for 300 beds was finally begun at the existing Gorge Road institution.

The extended care building program, which calls for 600 new beds in the area, was created in an effort to relieve some wards of patients who do not require acute hospital service at acute hospital prices. But even this help would be a slight relief rather than a cure. The fact is that this Sooke-to-Sidney community sorely needs both extended care and acute care beds.

Doctors are still booking non-urgent surgery cases for almost a year in the future. As of June 28 there was a waiting list of 1,386 for elective surgery at the Royal Jubilee Hospital, and some 1,300 awaiting beds for elective (non-urgent) surgery at St. Joseph's.

Non-urgent surgery cases frequently become urgent due to the long wait for attention, and thus get beds sooner. Some cases on a day-to-day priority system are able to get into hospital without a long wait, but they must be in serious need to warrant this privilege. At Royal Jubilee, beds for female patients are now reportedly being booked as far ahead as February, 1972; many male patients must wait at least until December of this year. St. Joseph's Hospital is booking patients for beds five and six months from now.

By any modern standard this is completely inadequate. The situation is unworthy of a prosperous community such as this. There is no real impediment to solving it except the long-drawn-out controversies of the various bodies and levels of government concerned and the apparent inability of local and provincial governments to recognize that, regardless of the legalistic and jurisdictional niceties, the people are being denied their right to adequate and early hospital care — which, incidentally, they pay for in advance through taxes. The basic situation has not changed appreciably in the last year or more.

Regardless of how the immediate participants view our progress, or lack of it, the public inevitably must judge it on results. And so far the results — despite costly surveys, interminable talk, and the very hard work of many persons, elected and otherwise, who have done what they can to solve the problem — are very, very meagre. Where are the beds?

There can be little reward at this point in rehashing the long chronicle of this effort and that, this opinion and that, this involvement and that — the point is that a serious and inexcusable situation still exists here in regard to hospital accommodation of all types. It stands as a challenge to, and an accusation against, every official who with better co-operation could do something really constructive but who, for one reason or another, has failed to achieve all that he wished to do and all that he should have done.

Political Ads

As a tax-paying citizen of the province of British Columbia, I object most strenuously to Premier Bennett's continuing practice of using public money for political advertisements.

Despite the transparent excuses, he is really buying editorial space [illegible] my tax money!

As a thinking voter I like to be informed and can be so through factual publications. However if it is so important to inform the public I would recommend a small column in the newspapers giving all the relevant statistics pertaining to a particular topic and then do one of three things:

1. Allow the reader to draw his own conclusions.

2. Allow each of the party leaders to comment.

3. Invite comments from statisticians or other suitably qualified persons in the particular field.

It is signficant that dictators — even benevolent ones — almost always plead that they do "what is good for the public"—meanwhile carefully eliminating possibilities of other opinions on what is "good". — (Mrs. J. W.) Heather Nicol, 1670 Cedar.

No Light Matter

With regard to the news item which has appeared in recent newspapers, showing Mr. Ralph Loffmark's concern with regard to increasing VD infection. Mr. Loffmark may well be concerned. We all should be.

In the May issue of Readers' Digest, the first article — which is from Maclean's — is entitled: "VD Strikes Again." It shows the alarming increase of gonorrhea and is accompanied by graphs from DBS.

It certainly is no matter to be treated lightly by any age group.

With this alarming condition in our midst, doctors should not hesitate to report to officials—which is their duty — cases who come under their care. — D. S. Ashdown, 3505 West 15th, Vancouver, B.C.

Postal Favor

Far be it from me to beat drums for the present mail service, but recently I addressed a letter to another province, had a lapse of memory after writing the street number and name and left out the province. A very pleasant-sounding male voice called me and verified which province I was writing to (apparently there is a Portage Avenue in another one) so that the letter could be processed. Having in the past had letters returned which were correctly and fully addressed, this kindness was most appreciated. I want to make it known. — Grateful.

Life and Death in Space

THE TRAGIC DEATH OF three Soviet cosmonauts, apparently in the closing minutes of a triumphal return to earth after a record-breaking three-week flight on a space-platform, has shocked the world.

There have been saddening fatalities in both United States and Russian space projects, but these have occurred on the ground. This week's accident that took the lives of three space pioneers was the first to occur away from the planet. The shock was all the more stunning by reason of the unknown factors in the triple death — there is still doubt as to what aspect of space travel caused the death of the trained, healthy men.

Whatever the results of the investigation, one conclusion to be drawn from the incident is that the technical space knowledge of both the United States and the Soviet Union should be made available by each nation to the other. It is imperative that man overcome the known and unknown hazards to human life that space exploration still presents. A co-operative effort would clearly be the most productive.

Meanwhile the three Russians have won their considerable niche in space exploration's hall of fame as courageous pioneers, scientists and adventurers. And rightly, they are being viewed by their countrymen as heroes, not victims. There will be others to live for extended periods in space — and perhaps to die from it. But Dobrovolsky, Paysayev and Volkov were the first.

Businessman and Education

MR. JOSEPH C. McCARTHY, president of Consumers' Gas Co. Ltd., Toronto, stands on questionable ground when he suggests that businessmen insist on changes in Canadian education to make it conform more closely to their own philosophy. Businessmen are not always the highest authority on education, though a democratic system should listen to their point of view, as it should to that of any other group.

Mr. McCarthy makes the point that industry, which has traditionally been generous in its support of schools and universities, has reason to object to systems that are "dedicated to fostering everything that threatens the livelihood of their benefactors." The position he takes could be a warning to schools and universities, who may learn from it why some sources of private revenue are drying up. More of the same is implied in his further question: "Why not make it known to boards of governors and alumni seeking funds that we are unimpressed with professors who preach against our way of life in one of the most advanced industrial societies in the world?"

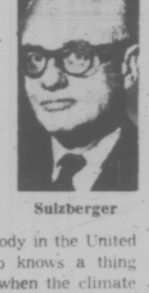
The dissatisfied former donor is entitled to withhold future voluntary contributions to an educational system, or institution, with whose philosophy he disagrees. He is not, however, entitled to stifle the voice of dissent, which is a proper element in any worthwhile educational system, or to paraphrase the familiar "what's good for General Motors is good for the country," particularly when that fallacious assumption is applied to the classrooms, the lecture halls and the laboratories.

WHO LEADS THE U.S. EXPEDITION?

Along the Trail Canada Blazed

By C. L. SULZBERGER

A UNITED STATES businessman with long experience in the China trade was asked by Peking representatives in London: "What has 20 years of American policy gained for your country except two wars? China is still there and the two American enemies in the Second World War — Japan and Germany — and your ally England — are doing most of the Chinese business. "There is nobody in the United States government who knows a thing about China. And now when the climate is changing in your country and responsible politicians of both countries know that China is here to stay — who do you have to make constructive policy? Nobody!"



Sulzberger

These remarks are reported in the current issue of East Europe. Lawrence W. Levine, a teaching fellow in the Harvard defence studies program, writes: "Through my family's trading interests I have known some of the traditional China traders since I was a small boy and over the last several years I have been in contact continuously with present-day traders."

Apparatus Dismantled

The point made by Levine's interlocutor is well taken. The United States, during a self-destructive period of passionately held irrational beliefs, similar to the argument now prevailing on all sides of the Vietnam debate, deliberately dismantled its excellent apparatus of China experts in the 1950s.

This purge was initiated by McCarthyite fanatics who wished to demonstrate that the United States had "lost" China to the Communists after the Second World War because of "traitors" in the state department — although the United States had never "had" China to "lose."

Nevertheless, not even feebly protected by the American government, an excellent group of trained Chinese-language scholars who had served their country faithfully was sacrificed to the delusional streak that sometimes tarnishes our history at critical moments.

Destructive Savagery

Barbara W. Tuchman, in her best-selling "Stilwell and the American Experience in China, 1911-45," refers both to the competence and unjust fate of these civil servants. She writes:

"The attacks and savagery that were soon to rage over America's China policy wrecked careers, blasted reputations and by the eventual dismissal of (John Paton) Davies, (John S.) Service and others cowed the future exercise of independent judgment in the Foreign Service."

As a result today, as we edge toward better relations with Peking and the distinct possibility of an eventual agreement to exchange ambassadors, the United States is woefully short on trained, experienced staff for an American embassy in Peking.

That is not to say such officers do not exist. There were some survivors from the McCarthyite purge and a tiny new generation of Sinologues has been nurtured in the state department and the Hong Kong Consulate General.

Certainly some of these men would be valuable in any United States embassy to Peking within the next few years but none of them is sufficiently well known to head such a mission. Nevertheless, it is immensely desirable that the first envoy Washington sends China should be an experienced professional diplomat with training on the specific problems he could expect to face.

Man for the Job

Such a man exists. He is that same John Paton Davies mentioned by Mrs. Tuchman — a highly intelligent, vastly experienced diplomat born at Kiating, China, the son of American missionaries, who speaks Mandarin, who served effectively as General Stilwell's political officer, and who also served in the United States Moscow Embassy.

Davies was eventually retired due to the frenzy of McCarthyism. Since his dismissal, his record has been demonstrated to be simon-pure and his wise, skeptical judgments have come to be widely admired.

He is now 63 years old but he is healthy and vigorous. Should events lead to an exchange of envoys with Peking within the next few years Davies would be an eminently desirable man to reopen the United States embassy. Moreover, were President Nixon to appoint him, the government would finally right an old injustice.

Nixon Moving

Many fundamental Sino-American issues remain to be settled. Nevertheless, Nixon has been moving with deliberate speed. In 1969 he became the first American president to designate the "People's Republic of China" by its legal name.

He subsequently called for better relations, permitted foreign subsidiaries of United States corporations to start Chinese trade, removed travel restrictions for American citizens and drew up a list of products United States firms can now export. Despite the Taiwan (Formosa) and United Nations questions, relations are warming up.

It would therefore be well for Washington to proceed with the creation of a "shadow embassy" to Peking, requesting it to start working on future policy and present problems. Davies would be a suitable choice to head it.

FROM MOSCOW

Nixon's Credibility Rising in Russia

By CHARLES BARTLETT

THERE are signs here that President Nixon may get his wish for a meaningful break-through in the East-West stalemate before Americans grow preoccupied with the presidential election. "Your system is peculiar," said one Soviet. "Your presidents do nothing for two years while they learn the job. Then they rush to make agreements with us so that they can be re-elected."

Bartlett

As tough traders, the Russians are delighted to write what advantages they can out of Washington's eagerness. But they are eager, too, because the realities of their own situation dictate an undisguised need for more constructive dealings with the West.

Chairman Brezhev told Prime Minister Trudeau that the collective leadership is deeply sincere in its promise to give more attention to the needs of the consumer. They have done what they have done without stinting on their military priorities. From this point, they will need to draw on resources, manpower, and skills which have previously gone to defence.

They will also need high quality, consumer-oriented technology which they can best procure from the United States. To buy these costly items, they must sell exports, so they need lower U.S. tariffs on their products. But they won't sell enough to pay for what they want, so they will require credits. "After all," said one official, "the Export-Import Bank was founded in the 1930s to finance trade with the Soviet Union. But we have never had a loan."

Shopping

Amtorg traders are circulating their shopping lists among American manufacturers. President Nixon held a stiff line on trade until he could use it to persuade the Soviets to be more tractable politically. Now he has signalled a shift that tells the Russians they may be able to buy non-strategic items which they could otherwise secure from Europe.

Soviet attitudes towards Mr. Nixon seem to have shifted sharply. They took a dim view of his election and one diplomat who knows the scene well believes that the politburo was beguiled into expecting, as he assumed the presidency, that American society would rapidly drift into an isolationism which would greatly assist Communist policy. Noting the demonstrations and dissent, they decided then to do nothing constructive that might diminish the American mood of frustration.

Dissenters Over-Emphasized

These leaders have decided now that they misjudged the power of the dissenters to divert the direction of American policy. If the Nixon doctrine means a less pervasive role in the world for Americans, they now perceive it also means a persisting role. Since the American retreat did not materialize, the Russians must see what they can negotiate.

Individual Russians still say few good things about Mr. Nixon but informed officials hint that he has impressed the policy-makers. One hears candid expressions of admiration for Henry Kissinger. Once baffled by the Nixon policy on Vietnam, the Soviets seem now convinced that he means to get out. Maintaining that they still hope for a settlement in the Middle East, they are pleased by Mr. Nixon's relative immunity from Jewish domestic pressures.

One big factor in the shift is an uncomfortable admiration for the skill with which the President has played his hand with Red China. If he had pushed toward a blunt link with Peking against Moscow, he would have stiffened their backs. But this delicate alliance makes it tempting for them to improve their ties with Washington.

There is, moreover, a feeling here that Mr. Nixon may well be re-elected. All these factors together make the Soviets more ready to co-operate in Mr. Nixon's plans for the pre-campaign months. They will yield him at least a fall visit to Moscow and quite possibly something more substantial.

"I THINK YOUR REAL FACE IS PRETTIER!"

Looking Back

From the Times of July 2, 1911:

The citizens of Victoria will have an opportunity to hear the question of reciprocity ably discussed tonight, at the mass meeting which is to be held in the Victoria theatre.

The question is one of the most important the people of Canada have ever had before them for consideration, and that portion of the Dominion's population which resides in Victoria will no doubt welcome the opportunity of hearing what is to be said in favor of the Laurier government's policy.

Quick as a Cat

Calgary Herald

City Council would be barking up the wrong tree by attempting to limit Calgary's cat population through a system of licensing.

But licences seem to be what is in the wind.

If the purpose of cat licensing is to provide another source of revenue, perhaps it might have some value. Conscientious cat owners probably could be persuaded to buy licences for their pets. But it would be impossible to collect licence fees from un-coperative owners because cats without licences could not be caught like dogs; they're too wily and quick-footed. On a basis of catch-as-catch-can, licensing wouldn't put an effective lid on the cat population.

There is no doubt that cats can be a nuisance in the city. They damage prized gardens and flower beds. They also take a heavy toll of birds.

It's no wonder most cats wear such superior, self-satisfied expressions. They know they've got it made. Theirs is no dog's life.

Rhetoric of Black Power Frightening in One But Not Other

WILLIAMS

By STEPHEN KLAIDMAN

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad — They are islands in the sun, celebrated in calypso ballads and travel brochures. Their names conjure up supple brownskin girls, flaming sunsets, exquisite resorts, bananas and mangoes ripe for the picking—paradise on earth for the native and tourist alike.

But they are also tiny and impoverished warts on the sea; social and economic remnants of slavery and a cruel plantation system. They are breeding grounds for virulent racism and self-hate. Their inhabitants are exploited, ill-fed, unemployed or under-employed and poorly housed.

They are rich in mineral wealth, all manner of tropical crops grow in their marvelous climate, and their natural beauty and year-round good weather is ideal for tourism.

They have these seeming paradoxes in common, yet they are radically different from one another. They are Trinidad and Tobago and Jamaica, the poles of the Caribbean physically, and in many ways culturally and sociologically.

They share similar physical and economic circumstances on the surface and their struggles to emerge into the 20th century world community with independence, freedom and dignity have appeared almost identical, and their histories seem remarkably similar.

In both countries the great hope for the future is expressed in the rhetoric of black power. But in Jamaica the rhetoric is menacing. In Trinidad it is not.

Kingston, capital of Jamaica, and a city of half a million people in a country of two million, contrasts opulent modern living with wretched poverty and an unemployment rate in the city of perhaps 30 per cent. Its black working people display a mixture of subservience and hostility. It is crime-ridden, violence is common, and there are areas of west Kingston that are unsafe for a white man to enter even during the day.

Some Problems Shared by Both

Port of Spain, on the other hand, is generally run down with small areas of grinding poverty and small areas of comfortable living comparable to upper middle class US. communities. The only really luxurious dwellings house the Roman Catholic and Anglican bishops. The people are friendly, have an obvious sense of their own worth. There is relatively little crime, violence is rare and no part of the city of 100,000 is unsafe at any hour of the day or night.

The contrast may seem too sharply drawn, but it is a reflection of impressions based on six days of intensive conversations with a variety of people in Trinidad, and four days of the same in Jamaica.

What is clear, however, is that although Trinidad seems to emerge well from comparison, it, too, has massive social and economic problems.

In Trinidad, the government is the largest single employer, the population is just over a million and the political opposition is hopelessly fragmented. Unemployment, estimated between 15 and 25 per cent, gives the government of Prime Minister Eric Williams extraordinary political leverage.

It is this, plus superior organization in a country where skilled managers are at a premium, that explains the continued pre-eminence of Williams' People's National Movement. Williams was elected prime minister at independence in 1962 and has remained in office ever since, although he is widely accused of corruption and dictatorial tendencies.

NORMAN MANLEY

He was last re-elected in May and his party, running virtually unopposed, won all 36 seats. But that is by no means an indication of the popularity of either Williams or the party, because almost 75 per cent of the registered voters did not go to the polls in an election that was virtually uncontested.

Another source of strength for Williams is the identification of the People's National Movement as a black man's party. The leader of the largest opposition movement, A. R. Robinson, a former Williams cabinet minister of mixed Indian-African descent, has tried to forge an alliance between blacks and East Indians. Blacks represent about 41 per cent of the population and East Indians about 38 per cent.

But Robinson's attempt has been something less than successful, indicating that race still plays a major role in the politics of Trinidad and Tobago.

However the quality of racial antagonism in Trinidad is radically different from that in Jamaica, where it is also woven into the political fabric.

Both islands are the sociological and economic products of colonialism (that is to say domination by a mother country), slavery, a one-product economy (in the past, sugar) and the iniquitous plantation system.

Although they shared these formative factors and many others — climate, physical features, occupation by Spanish, French and British — a historical condition has set them apart from one another and is more than anything else responsible for the profound differences that exist in the two societies.

Jamaica was slave for more than 300 years, Trinidad for less than 100. Trinidad was settled later and slavery was abolished there. Also, Trinidad was administered under a Spanish slave code in which it was much easier to win freedom than under the British system.

Opulent Wealth Beside Poverty

Also chattel slavery was never part of the Spanish system because of the Roman Catholic Church, which persisted in regarding a soul as a soul, regardless of the color of skin in which it was embodied.

The result was that slavery never became a part of the Trinidad mentality as it did in Jamaica, and it was necessary to bring large numbers of people from abroad to work on the sugar estates. For the most part they came from India as indentured laborers.

In Jamaica, on the other hand, slavery has left deep scars. In general terms, the black Jamaican is servile and frequently hostile, while the Trinidadian of whatever shade feels equal to any man and is friendly and gregarious.

Specifically, when a black Jamaican accepts a ride in a white man's car, he will get into the back seat and address the driver as massa, boss or sir. A Trinidadian will get into the front seat, immediately establish who the driver is and where he is from and begin discussing politics.

In Trinidad, even at election time, one rarely detects attitudes of racial superiority. The prevalent feeling is one of competition between parties with clear-cut racial affiliation.

In Jamaica, however, race and its linkage to economic and political power is probably the most critical problem facing the country and the government of Prime Minister Hugh Shearer.

While the black power movement is not numerically strong and it is somewhat fragmented, it is operating in conditions that are ripe for revolutionary change, unless the government does something to head it off.

Jamaica is roughly 80 per cent black with a privileged brown middle-class, a smattering of Chinese and well-to-do Lebanese and a few wealthy whites. There is a clear-cut correlation between black skin and poverty.

The sharp contrasts between affluence and poverty, with its obvious racial correlatives, the close proximity of the United States, rich, beckoning but unreachable for most Jamaicans, differences in speech patterns that exist to a far lesser degree in Trinidad, inequality in education, the relationship of the rich white to mother England, and its identification with slavery for the black, all of these things conspire to make Jamaica boil.

Prime Minister Shearer acknowledged in an interview that his country was undergoing strain natural in a democracy at Jamaica's stage of economic development. Time, he implied would provide the remedy.

He also minimised the importance of Jamaican black power leaders such as Trevor Munroe, who teaches political science at the University of the West Indies, and Marcus Garvey Jr., son of the Jamaican founder of the back-to-Africa movement.

Garvey and Munroe declined to be interviewed unless they were paid a fee, but on the basis of interviews with experienced observers and students of Jamaica, Shearer's estimation of their importance as individuals seems correct.

The gap between the poor blacks and the privileged browns and whites is increasing, according to data provided by the Jamaican economist Owen Jefferson. This has led to obvious frustration, which in turn has produced a high rate of violent crime and what many people in Jamaica regard as a high potential for revolution.

Race Still Plays A Major Role

Others see more potential for revolution in Trinidad, however, than in Jamaica, because of the Trinidadians's sense of his own worth. The line of reasoning is as follows: "I'm as good as that man, how come he has a big house and two cars and I don't?" The next step would seem to be, "I'm going to do something about that."

But that's where the reasoning seems to break down. An editorial writer for the Trinidad Guardian, the island's leading newspaper, put it this way: "In this country the most serious labor is preparing for carnival. That's no joke, man." And it wasn't. He was quite serious.

This kind of indolence makes Trinidad seem a place where little will change quickly, and certainly not violently.

There is a black power movement in Trinidad, too. It is called the national joint action committee and a number of its members were jailed after disturbances last year. Its leadership is young and has roots in the labor movement and other political opposition groups such as Tapia, headed by the dynamic economist Lloyd Best.

If one were to place the Williams government, Tapia and the National joint Action Committee in a political spectrum from right to left, the order would be Williams, Tapia and NJAC. If one takes each of them at its word, however — that is if one accepts their rhetoric as fact — they are all seeking much the same thing for Trinidad.

They all speak of people in the political process, sharing the wealth more equitably and, seeing that Trinidadians benefit fully from the fruits of the nation's resources and their own labor.

Clive Nunez of NJAC and Best agree that Williams pays lip service to those goals, but fault him for not doing what is necessary to move the country toward them. They both admit, as well, that if either of their groups win political power they will have to make compromises.

Jamaica has also been dominated since independence in 1962 by one party, the Jamaica labor party. But it has much more of a traditional two-party system than Trinidad. The People's National Party, led by Michael Manley — son of the late Norman Manley, who led Jamaica to independence — is linked with one of the two major trade union federations and is considered a credible opposition.

Shearer's Jamaica Labor Party has been successful in winning the support of the business community and like Williams in Trinidad, (as the embodiment of the ruling People's National Movement) he has provided a good climate for foreign investment. (The opposition is fond of pointing out that foreign investors rely on cheap labor.)

In Jamaica, the main source of wealth is bauxite, in Trinidad oil. In both countries this mineral wealth is for the most part controlled by north American companies and the largest share of the profits accrue to the overseas capitalists.

In both countries this fact of life retains the unpleasant smell of colonialism and economic slavery.

It is an article of faith in Trinidad and Jamaica — among the opposition and the more progressive members of the government — that more of the profits from these industries must return to the island economies.

For Jamaica, the critical question is now to develop a cheap power source that will enable Jamaicans to turn the bauxite into alumina and then aluminum on the island.

One pound of aluminum is the middle stage in the process and some alumina is already produced on the island. It sells for triple the price of a pound of bauxite.

Trinidad will undoubtedly follow the pattern of Persian Gulf and Mediterranean oil producers in raising its tax and royalty rates on locally produced oil, but much of its oil income is derived from Texaco's enormous refinery, which processes oil from South America, the Persian Gulf and the Mediterranean.

The Williams government has already taken over 51 per cent of Trinidad's largest sugar producer, Caroni, Ltd., which was formerly controlled by the British company, Tate and Lyle.

Whether or not something similar is in store for Texaco is uncertain, but there is pressure building for some action that will put economic power in the hands of the people, and in Trinidad, Texaco is synonymous with economic power.

The prevalent feeling among university economists is that the profits from oil and aluminum can be used to develop new industries, which in turn produce jobs, thereby helping to overcome what is perceived as the root problem, economic imperialism, and its crippling by-product, unemployment and underemployment.

For the moment, however, neither the professors nor the politicians seem either willing or able to put into motion the machinery of change. They are increasingly aware, however, that pressure is coming from below.

Major social problem confronting both islands is provision of adequate housing for fast-growing populations. Photo shows relatively modern semi-detached home in Trinidad alongside a makeshift and patched wooden shack — the type which makes up numerous slum areas on islands.

Progress Comes to Suffolk

By ANTHONY LEWIS

ORFORD, England — In "Akenfield," his classic study of an English village, Ronald Blythe wrote that to those coming from the outside world Akenfield seems "a holy place . . . a little arable kingdom where flints are the jewels . . . its very sounds are formal, hieratic: larks, clocks, bees, tractor hummings."

Blythe was writing about East Suffolk in the East Anglian bulge of England that juts out into the North Sea. It is mysterious country, flat but still secluded in its landscape, the fields marked off by hedges and streams, the vistas small and irregular.

It is an old part of an old land. The soil is littered with broken flints and, in places, with bits of Roman pottery. Among the winding lanes there is the occasional straight road, built by the Romans. Every village has its Norman church. The Bishop of St. Edmundsbury and Ipswich reckons he has to worry about 500 churches whose fabric is subject to threat from Death Watch Beetle or crumbling mortar.

There are churches that have lost their parishes. Driving up the A12, you go up a hill and suddenly see a great church rising out of the fields of grain and beet, with nothing but a few farm cottages around it. Why is it there?

That is Holy Trinity, Blythburgh, begun in the year 1412. Blythburgh was then a great port. Ships sailed up the river Blyth to carry off East Anglian wool; Blythburgh had its own mint. Then the ships got bigger and had to find deep-water ports. And the industrial revolution sent much of the remaining population north to the coalfields.

So today Blythburgh church, with pews for 500, serves a parish of 150 souls. The vicar is trying to raise $60,000 to repair damage that goes back to Cromwell's troopers and is as recent as 1944 when Clerestory windows were loosened, it is said, by the explosion of the plane that carried Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. to his death. Even more than other churches, Blythburgh speaks of what is past.

But the future is in East Suffolk, too. American planes roar overhead from their base at Bentwaters. On the coast the view of endless shingle beach is broken by a massive white block: The Sizewell nuclear power station at Thorpeness. From it the cables run out on giant pylons that disfigure the intimate landscape for miles.

Here in Orford is the latest intrusion from the world of science and war. The visitor comes upon it by driving slowly past the ruined castle and the oyster-age, down toward the dock. There at a distance, on the sand spit that separates the village from the sea, is a forest of tall steel masts and wires: 189 masts spread out in a radial pattern over 705 acres.

Officially, no one will say what it is. Only men with badges are allowed on the little ferry that crosses to the spit. Even in Parliament, questions about the "Orford Ness Project" get evasive answers.

In fact it is a radio device intended to give early warning of ballistic missiles. It produces enough energy so that fishermen were warned they might get mild shocks in the water near by. It cost $50 or $60 million to build and is evidently an American installation.

Perhaps somewhere else the masts and the pylons would look less incongruous. But the scale in East Suffolk is too small, the memories too strong. The fish here are still taken in small open boats; the coarse brown bread comes from ovens in the room behind the little bakery-confectioner's shop with its jars of barley sugar and chocolate dragees.

On the beach at Aldeburgh a fisherman, Billy Burrell, wonders where his world is going.

"This is part of England that hasn't been touched, isn't it?" he asks. "Now its changing — an atomic power station, this blasted thing in Orford.

"It's an obsolete part of the world, I know that. But it's so nice, and that's few and far between now. You see that man? He's come from Cambridge, 100 miles, to buy my fish. Why? Because he likes it here, and he can't find it like this anywhere else.

"People buy fish, and they talk. They like to talk. You know most places now people haven't the time of day."

An American intellectual was saying the other day that the English were trying to undo the industrial revolution. If some are, it may be mere nostalgia. But looking at the contrasts in East Suffolk, the landmarks of past and future, one can understand.

Thant Replacement Hunt Difficult Task for UN

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The 127 member countries of the United Nations are about to be faced with the extremely ticklish job of finding another secretary-general to replace U Thant.

Many delegations here are starting to accept the fact that the veteran Burmese diplomat who has been in office for more than a decade finally must step down.

His term in office expires at the end of this year and he has said he wants to quit. He has been persuaded in the past to remain after saying he will retire, but this time ailing health seems to put a stamp of finality on his statements.

There still are some who hope that Thant can be prevailed upon to accept a third five-year term. But in public and private he has been fighting this and on June 19 he was ordered to take a complete rest by his doctor.

Some delegates are reported in published reports to be saying that it would be inhuman to ask Thant to continue when the job has become such a burden to him.

So members have the task to find a competent person, acceptable to Arab and Jew, Asian and African, Communist and capitalist, developed and undeveloped, East, West and non-aligned, superpower and mini-state.

It will be tough.

It might be said that the one thing that is more difficult than finding a man acceptable for the job is filling the job.

Hugh Keenleyside, now chairman of the British Columbia Power Commission but in the past a veteran of high positions of the UN organization, put it succinctly in a recent Saturday Review article.

"There are not enough hours in the year to enable one man to work effectively at both the political and administrative task (of the secretary-general's job). No one understands this better than U Thant, who has tried valorously but vainly to meet both responsibilities."

The secretary-general has to be a strong man who can take part in the political affairs of the world—not without strong opposition from one side or another—and administer a vast international civil service that has 5,000 persons in the 36-floor secretariat building here alone.

Thant emphasized the political side but Keenleyside and others say that the administrative side of the job has suffered as a result.

Thant took the job as a compromise candidate. He was not confirmed for some time after his interim appointment.

Who is willing to take the thankless job? Rather surprisingly there are a fair number of men.

They are:

Max Jakobson, ambassador for Finland, supported by the Nordic states.

Ambassador Hamilton Shirley Amerashinghe of Ceylon.

Lij Endalkachew Makonnen, former Ethiopian ambassador who has the support of some of the members of the Organization of African States.

These men have formally announced their candidature.

But there are other names:

Kurt Waldheim, former Austrian foreign minister and now ambassador here, is reported to have said he is available.

Iranian Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, UN high commissioner for refugees, is often talked of.

FIRST WEST COAST HALT IN 23 YEARS

U.S. Longshoremen Strike Ports

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Civilian cargo shipping ground to a virtual halt today from Seattle to San Diego in the first strike by longshoremen on the United States West Coast in 23 years.

"No change," said James Robertson, an official of the employers, Pacific Maritime Association, as the strike entered its second day along the entire West Coast.

"No change," he repeated when asked if either side had made any move toward resuming the negotiations that began last November. In 24 ports between the Canadian and Mexican borders, most of the 15,000 members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union have been made idle.

The longshoremen are asking higher pay, guaranteed weekly wages and a pension at 62.

Mail, military cargo and passenger baggage continued to be handled by mutual agreement, but all other dock work halted Thursday. Negotiations broke off late Wednesday night less than two hours before the ILWU's five-year contract expired at midnight.

Members of the Teamsters Union, often contenders with ILWU locals for the handling of container cargo, refused to cross the picket lines.

ILWU negotiators, headed by 69-year-old President Harry Bridges, seek a two-year contract with 40 hours of wages guaranteed weekly for steady dockers, whether worked or not.

The union cut its demands for $1-an-hour wage increase each year to 85 cents the first year and 75 the second over the current base pay of $4.28 an hour. It also seeks a $500 monthly pension for workers with 25 years service retiring at 62.

The employers have not disclosed their offer.

The strike does not extend to Alaska or British Columbia.

Alberta Education Policy-Making 'Vexatious'

EDMONTON (CP) — A study of economic and population trends in Alberta in the next 35 years predicts "vexatious problems" for education policymakers.

The study, released Thursday, says that along with increased urbanization, there will be increased pressure in rural areas for centralization and reorganization of school facilities in the face of rising costs.

"Simultaneously, as rural communities continue to lose economic opportunity, the decline in their ability to meet educational costs will put additional pressure on the provincial government to increase its share of costs through equalization foundation systems."

And declining sources of municipal revenues will put more pressure on the provincial government to finance an increased share of education costs, the report said.

It was commissioned by the Human Resources Research Council and the Worth Commission on Educational Planning and written by Professor Don Seastone of the University of Calgary.

SIMPLIFY

The report says that the concentration of populations in the cities will tend to simplify the location of new post-secondary facilities. It warns against a policy of building these facilities outside the major centres in an attempt to reverse population flow.

"Costs of post-secondary education would accelerate sharply as massive construction programs for residence halls became necessary."

It also says that the Alberta government has not given sufficient attention to special education facilities for students who are slightly or seriously retarded, suffer emotional disturbances or have physical impairments.

RESPITE SEEN

Dr. Seastone said that in the next decade primary and secondary school systems will, for the first time in 20 years, have a respite from constantly growing numbers of students. This will allow a systematic review of progress and problems before another period of growth.

The pressure will continue until about 1980 in post-secondary institutions and resume again in about 1990, he said.

Six Killed

By The Canadian Press

At least six persons were killed in accidents on the prairies during the Dominion Day holiday, three of them in a collision between a car and a tractor-drawn farm cultivator in Alberta.

Four persons died accidentally in Alberta, one in Saskatchewan and one in Manitoba, all in traffic.

New Park Planned

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — The director of national parks said Thursday that the federal government will likely establish a second national park in Saskatchewan if agreement can be reached with the provincial government. J. J. Nicol, director of the National and Historic Parks Branch, said in an interview he expected that another five national parks will be created in Canada within the next 18 months and he was hopeful that one of them would be in the grasslands of southwest Saskatchewan. He did not specify the exact area being considered for the park.

Draft Dodgers

EDMONTON (CP) — The number of draft dodgers from the United States moving into Canada is diminishing, says a U.S. clergyman who ministers to them.

"My estimation is that this will be the last year that there's a significant level of such immigration into Canada," Rev. Robert Gardner said in an interview.

He said that more persons eligible for the U.S. draft are staying in the United States and resisting selective service from within.

"For example, about 50 per cent of the inductees in Michigan in recent months have either not shown up for their physical, or they show up and refuse to be inducted."

THE WEATHER

An upper level weather disturbance is centred over the eastern Cariboo this morning. It is moving eastward into the Prairies. Behind this system a ridge of high pressure is building along the B.C. coast and will move into the province on Saturday. Cloud and a few showers will linger over the central interior this morning but clearing will take place this afternoon as the system moves away. Elsewhere in B.C. it will be sunny except for an area of cloud over the north coast which is moving in from the Gulf of Alaska. Afternoon temperatures today will range from the mid sixties along the coast to the low and mid seventies over the southern interior. A slight warming trend will take place over all areas of the province on Saturday with afternoon temperatures reaching about normal for early July.

Jobless Rate Down in U.S.

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States unemployment rate dropped to 5.6 per cent last month, the lowest since last October, the labor department reported today.

This marked a decline of six-tenths of one per cent from the 6.2 per cent of the labor force registered in May. The figures are adjusted for seasonal factors.

The labor department warned that there were special factors involved in the June figures that may have resulted in an overstatement of the decline in the unemployment rate.

The actual number of people unemployed in June was 5,490,000—more than a million more than the 4,394,000 in May.

The total labor force rose to 87,784,000 during June from 85,954,000 in May.

Four Americans To Be Deported

OTTAWA (CP) — Four Americans on British Columbia rural communes supported by federal youth funds have been ordered deported and further investigations are under way by immigration officers.

The immigration department here confirmed Wednesday that a field investigation has turned up numerous Americans on 20 communes in southern B.C.

The communes received grants in the $1,000-$2,000 range from State Secretary Gerard Pelletier's $25 million Opportunities for Youth program.

Officials here were unable to confirm a report that there were no native Canadians in 11 of the 20 communes.

The report, based on an internal memo from the regional immigration office in Vancouver, said officers found 45 landed immigrants from the U.S., 95 visitors from the U.S., and 32 Canadians on the communes. Only half the 32 could produce proof they were Canadians.

IMMIGRANTS

The report said a commune at Winlaw in the Kootenays consisted of 13 landed immigrants from the U.S., four Americans without immigration status, and two U.S. non-immigrants.

An official here said four Americans from a commune at Winlaw — there are several in the area — were found to be in Canada illegally and were ordered deported.

They have a right of appeal to a federal board that is swamped with appeals and may take more than two years to hear their cases. In the meantime, they may live and work in Canada.

The status of other young Americans without landed papers was being investigated, the official said.

The Opportunities for Youth office itself was looking into the situation.

"We are going to get a report on every single one of them," Treffle Lacombe, special adviser to Pelletier, said in an interview.

If persons illegally in Canada were benefiting from funds given a project, recipients of the funds would be asked to tell them to leave. Funds would be cut off if this didn't happen.

Lacombe said, however, that the fact that a project doesn't include a single native Canadian doesn't make it illegal.

Under the Opportunities for Youth program, funds had been made available to native Canadians, landed immigrants or persons with a work permit for Canada.

"If they have landed status, we can't deny them a job," he said. "If we did, they'd only wind up on the B.C. welfare rolls — probably at greater cost to the taxpayer."

FIRST READING GIVEN BUDGET

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave first reading to legislation based on the government's budget Wednesday, then adjourned along with the Senate for a two-month summer recess.

Debate will continue on the budget after the Commons resumes business Tuesday, Sept. 7 The Senate resumes a week later.

Liberals stood against the three opposition parties to pass 108 to 67 a government motion that the House support in general the government's budget policies.

In debate earlier Wednesday, the last of six days on the budget, Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, accused the opposition of exaggerating the financial pains of Prairie farmers.

While total farm net income in the West dropped 36.9 per cent from 1969 to 1970, realized net income — the amount actually received — dipped only 1.2 per cent, he

Why Did Liberals Dump Caucus Head?

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Why was Grant Deachman dumped as chairman of the Liberal caucus?

The question is a subject of speculation among all MPs, especially Liberals.

Mr. Deachman, veteran MP for Vancouver Quadra, in his year as chairman re-instituted the old system of putting cabinet ministers on the caucus carpet to defend their policies and answer tough questions.

He made a point of chasing up ministers who habitually skip caucus and had a good deal of success in persuading them to attend.

However, speculation that Mr. Deachman was dumped because he offended some members of the cabinet by twisting their arms to attend caucus does not appear entirely accurate.

Jean Roy, MP for Timmins for three years and the new chairman, said in an interview he plans to continue the policy of putting cabinet ministers on the spot as much as possible.

VOTE SECRET

The caucus vote on the choice between Mr. Roy and Mr. Deachman was, like all caucus proceedings, secret.

Paul St. Pierre, MP for Coast Chilcotin and caucus secretary, declined to give the result.

So did all other Liberals.

One Liberal MP said the ballots were destroyed, just as at some Social Credit conventions.

The vote was reported close, however.

Before the Deachman regime, the Liberal caucus had been bogged down in 1968-69 in a committee system.

It had set up committees to conform to cabinet committees, but there was little interest in the committee system and attendance fell off sharply. In committees, ministers weren't on the carpet.

Mr. Deachman got his colleagues back to the old system of confrontation between cabinet and back-benchers and caucus attendance improved spectacularly.

But some ministers smarted so under criticism they seldom attended the Wednesday morning caucus meetings.

Prime Minister Trudeau is one of the most faithful attenders of caucus. State Secretary Gerard Pelletier is said to be among the worst.

MEMBER OF IRLY INDEPENDENT RETAIL LUMBER YARDS

TENURE PROCEDURES CALLED AWKWARD, TIME-CONSUMING

Procedures for granting tenure at the University of Victoria are awkward and time-consuming, an expert on tenure told the Wednesday hearing into the Uvic tenure and promotion dispute.

Dr. H. H. Saunderson, former president of the University of Manitoba, was invited to speak to the hearing on the philosophy and history of tenure.

His comments were intended to serve as a guide for members of the three-man advisory panel looking into the cases of three Uvic teachers, two of whom were denied tenure.

Sanderson said the Uvic document, which came into effect in 1968, has more procedural mechanisms spelled out than at other Canadian universities.

HORRIFIED

"I was horrified to hear of the amount of time taken in dealing with some of these cases," he said.

He was referring to comments by a member of the arts and sciences faculty advisory committee who said about 30 hours were spent deliberating the case of chemist Dr. Tikam Jain and eight hokrs on the case of Dr. William Goede of the English department.

"I think if they get any more mechanisms in here I'd like to have shares in the paper company," Saunderson said.

He said the practice of granting tenure—a guarantee of job security up until retirement age—originated from an era when university teachers could lose their positions for espousing nonconformist views.

IMPORTANT FREEDOM

"It's important to the well-being of the community that these people should have this freedom," he said.

Principles of tenure were laid down in 1940 by American academics.

In recent years, the concept of tenure has come under attack from both students and the tax-paying public who say it provides protection for incompetent teachers.

"It wasn't designed to protect incompetents—it was designed to provide a measure of economic support to academics expressing unpopular points-of-view."

GROSS INCOMPETENCE

Saunderson said a tenured faculty member can be fired only for gross incompetence or immoral behavior, which would have to be established by a careful investigation.

Such firings occur about once a year in Canada, he said.

He predicted in future, with an increasing supply of teachers, universities won't grant tenure as readily as in the past.

The inquiry under way at Uvic would appear to bear this out, he said.

. . . HEARING

Climenhaga decided to reverse the tenure recommendations from the department and faculty committees, and he outlined his feelings in a memo to Partridge dated March 6, 1970:

"It is difficult to put into writing the reasons for votes of this sort, but certainly there appears to be considerable doubt about Dr. Goede's work and relationship with the department."

He noted positive reports had been received about Goede's teaching, that he had published a number of articles and that he was deeply interested in "literature about civil rights."

DOUBTS

He concluded: "It is my belief that the doubts outweigh the positive factors, and hence I am not able to support the recommendation for tenure in this case."

Partridge, when asked Wednesday why he supported Climenhaga's decision, replied:

"I concluded the doubts expressed at the department level and the faculty level supported the negative recommendation of the dean."

JAIN CASE

In the Jain case, Partridge said, he examined the evidence to satisfy himself the charges brought against Jain by tenured members of the chemistry department were not motivated by racial prejudice.

The hearing is scheduled to re-open next Wednesday.

PhD 'Not Condition' for Graff's Promotion

Completion of the doctoral dissertation was not a condition for promotion of philosophy lecturer J. P. Graff, the man who recruited Graff has told the inquiry into the University of Victoria tenure and promotion dispute.

Dr. John De Lucca, former head of the Uvic philosophy department and now chairman of graduate studies at Queens University, Kingston, made a written submission to the three-man advisory panel looking into the cases of Graff and two other faculty members.

De Lucca's statement was read at Wednesday's hearing by Duncan lawyer David Williams who is acting as counsel for the panel.

1965 POLICY

He said in 1965 when the philosophy department recruited four new members the policy of the university was not to offer assistant professorships to anyone not holding a PhD.

But given the scarcity of philosophy teachers at the time ("a seller's market"), De Lucca arranged with R. T. Wallace, then acting president, to hire four instructors including Graff, who had not completed their PhDs.

The statement "to be promoted to assistant professor upon completion of PhD" was put into their notices of appointment, De Lucca said.

". . . The phrase was never understood to extract an undertaking on the part of Mr. Graff (and the others) that they would not be promoted until they obtained the PhD.

"In all candor, I must express my astonishment that any administrators at all familiar with the conditions in the academic marketplace at that time could conceivably interpret the condition in any other manner."

Graff's application more than a year ago for promotion to the position of senior lecturer was supported unanimously by other members of the philosophy department, including the chairman.

NEXT LEVEL

The recommendation supporting the promotion was supported by a faculty committee at the next level, but overturned by dean of arts and sciences Dr. John Climenhaga.

Climenhaga and Uvic president Bruce Partridge maintain that according to the university tenure document Graff must complete his PhD in order to be promoted.

Three B.C. Mills Lose $36 Million Since Startups

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three northern British Columbia forest companies — Prince George Pulp and Paper Ltd., Intercontinental Pulp Co. Ltd., and Takla Forest Products Ltd.— have suffered losses totalling more than $36 million since they started production in recent years.

This information was contained in the annual report of Reed International Ltd., a London-based pulp, paper and publishing firm which is a partner in the three companies.

Also a partner is Canadian Forest Products Ltd., which like the three operating companies is a private firm and does not publish its figures.

The report of the publicly-owned Reed firm showed that Prince George Pulp and Paper, a major producer in the province's interior, lost $19,033,820 from startup in April, 1966, to the end of 1970.

Intercontinental Pulp was running in the red at $10.9 million after starting production in May, 1968.

Takla Forest Products, which started logging and sawmill operations in 1969 to feed the two pulp companies, had lost $6.6 million at the end of 1970.

TRIPLE BLOW

Reed chairman S. T. Ryder said long strikes at the two Prince George pulp operations, the unpegging of the Canadian dollar and poor international market conditions combined to maintain the losing trend.

Prince George Pulp and Paper lost $489,060 in calendar 1970, Intercontinental Pulp lost $2,351,440, and Takla $5,805,091.

Mr. Ryder was hopeful in the report:

"The two British Columbia pulp mills reached profitability during the early part of the year (1970), but the combined effects of the alteration in the exchange rate and a two-month strike turned the over-all results into losses for the year.

"So far in 1971, both mills are again running profitably and are proceeding with programmed developments in performance.

"The Takla Forest Products lumber mill did not show the expected progress. Due to poor startup performance and abysmal lumber prices, the first full year's operations were at a substantial loss.

"Together with our partners, we assessed the measures to be taken and reaffirmed our support for this enterprise. Improvements so far this year support our decision."

However, a Vancouver spokesman for Canadian Forest Products was not so optimistic.

"I just don't see any encouragement. Wages and taxes are going up and our prices are not improving."

Prince George Pulp and Paper is owned jointly by Reed and Canadian Forest Products, each holding 50 per cent. It has a capacity of 800 tons a day of bleached kraft pulp and sackcraft paper.

Reed and CFP each own 37.5 per cent of Intercontinental Pulp—the remainder held by Feldmuhle of Germany. It produces 650 tons of bleached kraft pulp a day.

Takla Forest Products operates sawmill, planer and veneer plants at Fort St. James, as well as other facilities in the region.

ECC Chairman Defends Research

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Economic Council of Canada chairman Arthur Smith has defended his research agency from a sudden attack by the federal government's No. 2 mandarin.

Deputy finance minister S. S. Reisman told the senate national finance committee here that the seven-year-old ECC is tired, out of touch with the country and repeating itself with continuing studies on productivity.

"I'm rather surprised at this sort of implication," said Smith in an interview. "It doesn't seem to me in accord with the realities of what the council has been doing."

LITTLE RESEARCH

He said while immense research has been accumulated on biological productivity in such fields as agriculture, there have been "relatively few man hours of research on economic growth and productivity and Canada needs to know much more about this subject."

The council had deliberately established links with business and community groups to stay in touch with the economy and is still vigorously "trying to suggest new policy settings on the frontiers of economic knowledge" to the government's decision-makers, Smith said.

Reisman's attack sharply conflicts with widespread compliments that have fallen on the ECC over the years from various sectors. Several organizations, including business groups, have urged the government to extend and give more weight to the ECC's functions because it was more aware of national needs than the bureaucracy.

Exports Suspended

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has suspended all permits to export military equipment to Pakistan and all permit holders have been notified, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons Wednesday.

He said a shipper of jet parts to Pakistan was told of the suspension after the parts were sent from Moncton to dockside at Montreal.

Customs officials have put an embargo on jet-fighter parts, barring them from loading on the Pakistan freighter Padma, now in Montreal harbor.

Sharp said the exporter, Maritime Aircraft Overhaul and Repair Ltd., was granted the export permit in advance, in line with government practice.

But it had been issued on the understanding that it could be suspended or cancelled if government policy changed.

In this case, the government had banned export of military goods to Pakistan after the Pakistan government took severe measures to quell an independence movement in East Pakistan, killing hundreds of thousands of civilians.

5,000 Men Needed If Pipeline Built

JASPER (CP) — A 2,500-mile northern natural gas pipeline proposed by the Northwest Project Study Group will initially provide 5,000 construction jobs, but only 150 of them will be permanent, says L. G. Hurd, a spokesman for the group.

Hurd told Canadian Gas Association meeting that although the number of permanent positions appeared small, it would help reduce the present high rate of unemployment in most small northern settlements.

"It is our intention to participate in training programs which will provide northerners; including Indians and Eskimos, with the opportunity to secure and maintain responsible positions in our pipeline operation and maintenance."

The possibility of inflation resulting from the enormous sums of money, estimated at $10 billion, brought into Canada to construct the pipeline would be averted by careful management, he said.

Projected capital expenditures for both oil and gas lines from the Arctic would be spread over 10 to 15 years. Construction of both lines simultaneously was considered remote.

Hurd said maximum Canadian financial participation would be made available in that section of the line within Canada.

The Northwest Project foresees a $3 billion system connecting the Arctic gas resources with the market area, he said. It would involve a single line from Prudhoe Bay across the Yukon, Northwest Territories, Alberta, Saskatchewan and ending at Emerson, Man. Other carriers would move the gas to markets in eastern Canada and the midwest United States.

He said the midwest U.S. was chosen as the major market because it would supply the maximum competitive advantage to make an Arctic gas pipeline economically viable.

To avoid thawing of the permafrost, the group has carefully selected the pipeline's route; would limit construction to the winter months; would repair and revegetate the insulating, organic layer on the right-of-way, and would refrigerate the gas in the pipelines to avoid heat transfer to the permafrost, he said.

B.C. to Get Electric Plant

MONTREAL (CP) — Northern Electric Co. Ltd. will establish a manufacturing plant in British Columbia, says John C. Lobb, the company's new president.

He told a news conference a plant is needed in British Columbia because of the rapid development of that province, and to supply the market of the western United States.

"We have to set up a manufacturing operation on a small scale in British Columbia."

Lobb said details for the establishment of the new plant have not been completed but that it would be built sometime next year.

$3.34 Cumulative Redeemable Convertible Voting Preferred Shares of the par value of $52.00 each Fixed, cumulative, preferred cash dividends of $3.34 per share per annum, when and as declared by the Board of Directors, will accrue from July 22, 1971 and will be payable quarterly on the 15th day of February, May, August and November. The $3.34 Preferred Shares will not be redeemable prior to August 1, 1977 but will be redeemable on and after that date at $52.00 per share with a premium if redeemed on or before August 1, 1983, together with accrued and unpaid dividends to the date fixed for redemption.

Conversion Privilege

Each $3.34 Preferred Share will be convertible at the option of the holder at any time prior to the close of business on August 1, 1983 or the last business day prior to the date fixed for redemption of such share, whichever is the earlier, into one common share of the Company. This conversion basis will be subject to adjustment in certain events.

In the opinion of Counsel for the Underwriters, these $3.34 Preferred Shares will be investments in which the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act states that companies registered under Part III thereof may, without availing themselves of the provisions of subsection (4) of Section 63 of the said Act, invest their funds and will also be assets which under the provisions of the Foreign Insurance Companies Act may be vested in trust by foreign insurance companies for the purposes of said Act without availing themselves of the provisions of Section 4 of Schedule I to said Act.

Applications have been made to list the $3.34 Preferred Shares on the Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver Stock Exchanges. Acceptance of the listing will be subject to the filing of required documents and evidence of satisfactory distribution, both within 90 days.

We, as principals, conditionally offer, subject to prior sale, these $3.34 Preferred Shares if, as and when issued and accepted by us in accordance with the conditions contained in the underwriting agreement with the Company, and subject to the approval of all legal details by Guy Houle, Esq., General Counsel for the Company and by Messrs. McMaster, Meighen, Minnion, Patch & Cordeau on our behalf.

Price: $52.00 per share to yield 6.42%

Subscriptions will be received subject to rejection or allotment in whole or in part and the right is reserved to close the subscription books at any time without notice. It is expected that the $3.34 Preferred Shares will be available for delivery on or about July 22, 1971.

Three-Week Extension For Pulp Mill Cutback

CROFTON — British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. estimates it will take four or five weeks to repair the recovery boiler damaged by an explosion June 21 at its Crofton pulp and newsprint complex.

Officials estimate the unit will be out of service until the end of July, extending by three weeks a planned four-week curtailment of 50 per cent of the mill's kraft pulp production.

Some 25 employees were laid off due to the previously-announced production cutback, which started June 13. The mill continues to employ 800 persons in the ongoing pulp operations and 100 in its newsprint mill.

The Tahsis Co.'s pulp mill at Gold River was to resume production today after a month-long shutdown caused by adverse market conditions for B.C. pulp.

Donor Helps Sunset Ceremonies

Victoria's sunset ceremonies, which began June 29, will run a full schedule this summer thanks to an unnamed donor of $5,000.

Victoria council had added $6,000 to its contingency fund this year for the ceremonies, hopeful other municipalities would help make up the total cost.

Ald. Percy Frampton who this week announced the ceremonies would again be held, would not reveal the source of the $6,000 to match the city's amount.

The ceremonies, starting at 8:30 in front of the Legislative Buildings, will be performed by the guard and band of the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps.

Scheduled performances: July 3, 6, 9, 13, 15, 17, 19, 23, 27, 31; Aug. 3, 6, 7, 21, 24, 28, 31; Sept. 3, 6.

TROOP BUILD-UP RESULT OF FAULTY PLANNING

Johnson Fought Early Vietnam Attack

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New articles based on the Pentagon papers show President Lyndon B. Johnson sought to avoid a premature attack on North Vietnam and that his administration later miscalculated it own troop needs and the Viet Cong's ability to build strength.

Papers made available to The Associated Press said that in March, 1964, Johnson rejected recommendations to attack the North as premature and favored instead building a strong military and political base in the South.

The rapid troop buildup that followed in the next two years, however, was the result of faulty planning, The New York Times says in an article based on its copy of the secret 47-volume study tracing United States involvement in Vietnam.

REPORTS ANALYSIS

Accounts based on the documents published in today's editions of The Washington Post—such as the Pentagon's 1961 calculation that no more than 205,000 ground troops would be needed if Hanoi or Peking overtly intervened in the war—have already been reported by The AP.

The AP story today reports the Pentagon study's analysis of the growing U.S. involvement in the war from 1964 to 1966 while The Times article traces the expansion of that involvement in 1965 and 1966.

The AP says the study showed presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy and policy planner Walt W. Rostow were urging Johnson four months into his term to combine military pressure against North Vietnam with pacification efforts in the South.

However, Johnson decided action against the North would be planned only on a contingency basis and would be carried out only after building up U.S. political and military strength in the South.

The bombing of North Vietnam was under way by November, 1964, and although its tempo increased through 1965, "there was no sign," the Pentagon study says, that it "had brought about any greater readiness to settle" on the part of the North Vietnamese "except on their terms."

TO REINFORCE

By December, 1965, there was talk in Washington of pouring in more reinforcements. Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara said in a Dec. 7 memo, "perhaps 600,000 more might be needed."

The Times' account of the Pentagon Papers says the Johnson administration decided in 1966 to bomb Hanoi's oil-storage facilities despite warnings from the Central Intelligence Agency that the raids would not "cripple Communist military operations."

Instead, the Pentagon analysts wrote, Washington apparently accepted the military's estimate that the bombing would "bring the enemy to the conference table or cause the insurgency to wither from lack of support."

The Times says the study showed U.S. military commanders in 1965 and 1966 were confident of victory and Westmoreland, commander of all U.S. forces in Vietnam, predicted he could defeat the Communists "by the end of 1967."

In Washington, Attorney-General John N. Mitchell said Thursday the justice department would prosecute any violations of criminal law committed in the disclosure of the secret study.

The justice department already has indicted Dr. Daniel Ellsberg on charges he violated the Espionage Act and converted government property to his own use in taking the papers. He admits he leaked the study to the press.

Papers Don't Show War's Recent Sides

By RICHARD PYLE

SAIGON (AP) — For all their fascinating detail on the origins of United States involvement in the Vietnam war, the Pentagon Papers cast little light on how the war has come to where it is now. In the three years since they were written, the conflict has undergone radical changes.

The most important was a reversal of U.S. policy that began the withdrawal of American combat forces while the Vietnamization program imposed a greater share of fighting on the South Vietnamese.

Another was the spread of open hostilities into Cambodia in 1970 and Laos in 1971, geographical expansions of the war that the Nixon administration gambled would also shorten it.

Despite these sweeping developments and the general disaffection of the United States with Vietnam, many Vietnamese and the same Americans in Indochina have an unsettling sense of repetition about the present situation.

SEES BLOODY REVERSE

Col. David Hackworth, a much-decorated U.S. Army officer with 5½ years in Vietnam as combat leader and senior adviser, sees the military situation reverting in the next two years to where it was in 1963-65. The South Vietnamese in 1965 were losing a battalion a week. Hackworth's appraisal is that after the combined forces pull out, the Saigon forces will again face a bloody and probably losing battle against a superior enemy.

Apparently beset by some of the same fears, President Nguyen Van Thieu predicts a "major confrontation" between North and South Vietnamese forces in late 1972 or early 1973, after most combined forces troops have gone.

Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, is said to share this view.

The government's control over the population has continued to increase. The last report, based on the controversial hamlet evaluation system developed by U.S. officials, said Saigon had relative security over 94 per cent of the country's 18 million people.

Their morale raised by the Cambodian drive in the spring of 1970, the ARVN—Army of the Republic of Vietnam—and other regular units took severe casualties and some sharp morale setbacks in the drive into the Laos panhandle last February and March.

GOING IS HEAVY

Cambodia proved a success in the long run because it broke up North Vietnamese supplies and battle plans for most of a year. But experts say Hanoi now appears to have restored to strength many of its seasoned units in that country, and the South Vietnamese, even with continued U.S. air support, are finding the going heavy.

While many figures are deceptive and reflect a limited view of the true situation in the provinces, experienced observers find the Saigon government in its strongest position ever.

This is indicated by a variety of evidence. Many highways undrivable two years ago now are open to regular traffic. Viet Cong attacks are limited primarily to assaults on regional and Popular Force militia units. Current Viet Cong plans apparently aim at reinstating a presence and influence in the villages, working through the existing political system where necessary.

Threats Charged

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 51-year-old Saugus, Calif., lifeguard was charged Thursday with attempting to extort $525,000 from three airlines by calling in bomb threats. FBI agents said they arrested Willard W. Prewett. A spokesman said the telephoned threats were made to Pan American World Airways on June 15, Trans World Airlines June 22 and American Airlines June 29. Pan American was asked for $150,000, TWA $200,000 and American $175,000, authorities said.

Lightning Strikes

NEW YORK (AP) — Lightning struck the RCA building in Rockefeller Centre—headquarters of NBC—Thursday and sent a 200-pound piece of limestone 70 storeys down to the street. Paul Fallon, 57, of New York, and Michael Hillard, 22, of Stamford, Conn., suffered leg cuts and bruises when the limestone fragmented on hitting the ground.

Evonne Goolagong Wimbledon Queen

JOHN NEWCOMBE
. . . blasts Rosewall

LONDON (CP)—Evonne Goolagong won the all-England women's singles tennis title at Wimbledon when she beat Margaret Court 6-4, 6-1 in an all-Australian final here today.

Miss Goolagong, 19, became the youngest woman ever to win the Wimbledon singles crown since Maria Bueno of Brazil did it at the same age in 1959. She had been seeded No. 4 here.

The tousle-haired new champion needed only 63 minutes to unseat the 28-year-old Mrs. Court. The victory brought her $5,760 in prize money.

Mrs. Court suffered from nerves at the start, despite her long experience, and dropped her service in the opening game. Miss Goolagong, in contrast, showed no sign of the jitters and kept the ex-champion under constant pressure.

The game was played before 17,000 spectators on the centre court. Miss Goolagong received a tremendous ovation when she accepted the trophy from Princess Alexandra.

Daughter of an aboriginal sheep-shearer in Barellan, 400 miles south of Sydney, Miss Goolagong was "discovered" by Vic Edwards, proprietor of a Sydney tennis school, when she was 11. She went to live with Edwards and his wife, and he became her guardian.

THREE-TIME CHAMP

The top-ranked Mrs. Court, long a dominant figure in the game, had been favored to win the Wimbledon title, which she had taken three times previously. It was the first time two Australian women had met in the final.

Miss Goolagong and Mrs. Court will be team-mates in the finals of the women's doubles here.

Mrs. Court had been beaten only twice previously this year —by Miss Goolagong in the Victorian state championships in Melbourne and by Gail Chanfreau of France in the French championships on hard courts when she was suffering from a virus infection.

WON FRENCH TITLE

Miss Goolagong has an impressive array of 1971 victories, including the French women's open title.

She is fast, natural and cool, as she demonstrated in disposing of second-seeded Billie Jean King of the United States, a three-time Wimbledon winner, 6-4, 6-4 in 55 minutes Wednesday.

Mrs. Court beat countrywoman Judy Dalton 4-6, 6-1, 6-0.

The men's singles final Saturday will be between defending champion John Newcombe, 27, of Australia, and Stan Smith, 24, of the U.S.

In the most one-sided semi-finals for many years, Newcombe swamped 36-year-old fellow-Australian Ken Rosewall Thursday, 6-1, 6-1, 6-3.

Smith easily beat American Tom Gorman 6-3, 8-6, 6-2 in a match robbed of tight competition because of Gorman's nagging back trouble, left over from his quarter-final triumph over top-seeded Laver.

Irish Absorb Two Beatings

New Westminster Salmonbellies unleashed the staggering second blow of a rapid one-two punch by crushing Victoria Shamrocks 18-5 before 1,422 fans Thursday night in New Westminster.

Salmonbellies, now leading the Western Lacrosse Association by seven points over second-ranked Coquitlam Adanacs, had downed the Irish 13-8 the night before in Memorial Arena.

On Thursday, Shamrocks held the lead briefly in the first period.

Wayne Spooner, recently brought up from senior "B" ranks, opened the scoring for New Westminster at 2:13 but Ranjit Dillon notched the first of his two goals at 3:43 to knot the count. Ken Alexander gave Victoria 2-1 lead at 5:27.

DOWNHILL RIDE

After that effort it was all downhill for the Islanders.

Playing-coach Paul Parnell tied it up again 27 seconds later and Wayne Goss (6:10) and Terry Wright (6:31) left the home squad with a 4-2 advantage after the first period.

This lead was then increased to 13-3 after the second period.

Only some spectacular and dogged goaltending by Victoria's George Grover kept the rocks in the game at all as New Westminster outshot them, 74-34.

Grover made 56 stops overall compared to 29 for his counterpart, Joe Comeau.

Goss led the rout with four goals and four assists while Spooner also notched four goals.

The eight-point production by Goss gave him that much of a league lead over Coquitlam's Wayne Shuttleworth in the individual scoring race.

Ranjit Dillon paced Victoria with his two-goal output while singles were added by Muzz Bryant, Vern Black and Alexander.

"They were being outhustled," co-coach Ron Jay said later.

BRIEF FLURRY

Much the same could be said for the defeat suffered before 1,579 Memorial Arena fans on Wednesday night.

Except for a brief seven-minute flurry in the third period when Shamrocks closed the gap from 11-4 to 11-8, the Victorians seemed to stall in all departments.

Jim Giles led the victory in Victoria with three goals while Goss and Mac Tyler each fired two.

Nirmal Dillon and Frank Alexander topped Shamrocks with two goals each.

YOU'VE GOT PROBLEMS?

If you think you have problems, consider plight of Bob Payne, who would be better off with hatchet. Pro from Mount Vernon, Ill., prepares to hit shot from deep in trees along 18th fairway during Thursday's first round of Canadian Open golf tournament in Montreal. One of several players running into tree trouble, Payne finished with 77 to trail leaders by 10 shots. (CP Wirephoto)

RIDLEY DISQUALIFIED

London Crew Edges Shawnigan Oarsmen

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (CP) — A pair of oarsmen from the Don Rowing Club of Toronto emerged today as the only Canadians left in the Henley Royal Regatta as the two other entries fell in a quirk of fate and the narrowest of defeats.

The Don pair of Rick Symsyk and Australian-born Brian Denny meet an entry from the Leander Rowing Club of London today in a semi-final of the Silver Goblets and Nickall's Challenge Trophy. If the Don oarsmen wins today they go on to the finals Saturday.

Ridley College of St. Catharines, Ont., schoolboy eight champions here last year, were disqualifier Thursday after a near capsize and an unscheduled dunking of one of its members.

FIRST MAJOR RACE

In the same competition for the Princess Elizabeth Trophy for schoolboy eights, Shawnigan Lake, B.C., was defeated by Emanuel College of London. Shawnigan Lake, taking part in its first major race, was beaten by two-thirds of a length.

The Don club was optimistic today compared with the gloom pervading the other Canadian groups.

Ridley College was leading Tabor Academy of Massachusetts by a length when disaster struck. A rudder string snapped, causing the Canadian boat to swerve, flinging it over to one side and pitching Dirk Gidney of Ancaster, Ont., into the Thames.

APPEAL REJECTED

Canadian coach Neil Campbell appealed to the regatta stewards for the race to be restarted, but his request was turned down and the Ridley entry was disqualified.

Shawnigan coach Joe Gray was disappointed at the loss his crew suffered but said "it was the first major race that most of our boys have rowed in."

Math Grad Likes The Simple Count

Four at Five-Under-Par To Share Lead in Open

MONTREAL (CP)—Rolf Deming, a mathematics graduate of the University of Minnesota and first-round co-leader in the Canadian open golf championship, says he's "always had an aversion to adding big numbers."

The only numbers he had to add Thursday at Richelieu Valley Golf and Country Club were guaranteed to give him no pain. They totalled 67, good for five under par and a share of the first-round lead with Rod Funseth, Phil Rodgers and Lou Graham.

Deming, 31, and in his third year on the professional golf tour, told reporters he had a lucky round. The Monominie, Mich., resident said he sank chip shots on both the 13th and 16th holes for birdies.

Rodgers credited his putting with giving him an opening round of 67.

The La Jolla, Calif. pro, sixth-place finisher in last year's Canadian Open, would not predict the four-round score necessary to win the $30,000 top prize in this year's event.

"The way the wind's blowing it's going to be hard to put four good rounds together. Before I started I said I'd take 280 but I didn't think there'd be so many low scores."

'Look for Some 63s or 64s . . .'

Another co-leader, Funseth, "really thought the scores would be better."

"I still think you'll see some 63s and 64s," the 38-year-old San Jose, Calif., resident said after his round.

One stroke behind the leaders were George Knudson of Toronto and Rod Curl of Redding, Calif.

Knudson salvaged his four-under-par round with a birdie on the ninth, his finishing hole, after flubbing the approach shot.

The leading Canadian knocked in a 50-foot shot from a bunker after chopping his approach shot into the sand when he was only 25 feet from the green.

A large gallery, part of an opening-day record crowd of more than 12,000, roared its approval as Knudson sank his shot from the trap to gain the birdie four.

Seven golfers were tied with three-under-par 69s after the first 18 holes of the $150,000 tournament.

Among them was Ben Kern of Toronto, a surprise starter who had earlier failed to qualify for the event but was allowed to play when U.S. pro Charlie Sifford failed to show up.

Tied with Kern were Don Bies of Seattle, Ralph Johnston of Jackson Heights, N.Y., Lionel Hebert of Lafayette, La., Dewitt Weaver of Atlanta, Herb Hooper of Richmond, Va., and Hal Underwood of Humble, Tex.

Other big names did not fare so well in the warm, gusty conditions which prevailed throughout the first day of play.

Player, Orville Moody and U.S. Open winner Lee Trevino —all regulars on the pro golf tour—could do no better than one-over-par 73s.

Best of the two amateurs in the field was Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., who recorded a 73, two strokes better than the only other non-pro, Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont.

Extra Inning Helps Burnaby to 'Rubber'

The difference was in an extra inning Thursday as the classy Burnaby Villas clipped Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League all-stars 3-2 to take the "rubber" in a three-game exhibition series at Royal Athletic Park.

Villas opened the holiday series with a 12-1 victory but were checked, 6-2, by Les Brice in the second game.

In the league play Wednesday, Al's Home Service upset the leading Farmer Construction 4-3 in nine innings.

Former Bomber Dies in Shooting

LANSAS CITY (AP) — Larry D. Roberts, 22-year-old running back who played briefly with Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League last season, was shot to death here.

Police said Willie Rarl Minis, 33, who told them he and his wife heard prowlers outside their home, shot Roberts once through the abdomen.

LIONS PARE LIST TO FOUR

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions trimmed another three players from their training camp roster Thursday, paring the squad to 58 heading into a four-game Western Conference exhibition schedule starting Monday.

Head coach Eagle Keys released quarterback Bob Naponic, who spent two years on the taxi squad of Houston Oilers in the National League, defensive tackle Peter Kudryk and defensive back Henry Lodewyks.

The departure of Naponic leaves just four quarterback in camp—Paul Brothers, Tom Wilkinson, Don Morehead and Dave Mays. Vidal Carlin, the team's backup quarterback last year, was dropped Tuesday.

'Dabbler in Poetry' Grand Prix Threat

Drivers from as far east as Alberta and as far south as Oregon will be on hand to compete in the International Conference of Sports Car Clubs-sanctioned "Grand Prix" meet Saturday and Sunday at Western Speedway.

Practice sessions and novice races will be held Saturday while a nine-race program is set for Sunday. Starting time each day is 12:30 p.m.

In addition to the far-away visitors, a bevy of entries is expected from the Vancouver-New Westminster area as well as from the host Victoria Motor Sports Club.

Among the more interesting entrants are Jim Walker of Springfield, Ore., and David Jamieson of West Vancouver.

WON SEDAN TITLE

Walker, a high school English teacher and baseball coach who "dabbles in poetry," won the ICSCC "B" sedan championship in 1970.

Jamieson is an immigrant from Australia, where he taught at the George Reynolds Racing Drivers' School in Melbourne.

Among Victoria drivers will be the DGR racing team of Paul Reynolds, currently running first in Formula Ford standings in ICSCC, Stu Goodridge, runner-up to Reynolds, and fourth-ranked Pat Davidson.

VAN DE WATER WINS FEATURE . . . . . . AT WESTERN SPEEDWAY

Chris Survives Fender-Banging Bouts

Sophomore driver Chris Van de Water managed to survive two bouts of fender-banging Thursday night and went on to collect a victory in the 100-lap stock car main event at Western Speedway.

Van de Water started the night off right before 2,833 car-racing fans by winning the "A" trophy dash. Later, during the fast heat, Van de Water tangled with Ron Fleet and Ray Birtwhistle before scraping the grandstand wall.

Undaunted, he was among the 25 drivers starting the main event.

Barry Wright had the lead for the first lap before relinquishing it to Lyle Barr, who led for the next four circuits. Orton Ker took over on the sixth lap before being passed by Van de Water on the ninth.

Larry Pollard mounted a strong challenge to Van de Water near the mid-way point in the race but had to drop out for a few laps after the 60th because of mechanical difficulties. Pollard's father, Earl, then assumed the runner-up spot.

Rob Layfield and Jim Gicas spun out on the 92nd lap leaving Layfield's car in the middle of the track on the number-two turn to bring out the yellow caution flag and freeze the lap count.

After the green flag was produced, Van de Water and Earl Pollard staged a running battle the remainder of the way. Van de Water tangled briefly with Larry Pollard while trying to lap the young driver but managed to retain his position and win by one car length over Earl.

In the foreign-stock section of the evening's program, Roy Passmore won both 15-lap main events after finishing second to Dick Shead of Vancouver in the trophy dash.

Next race night at Western is Saturday. Time trials for the super-stock and foreign-stock competitions begin at 7 p.m.

FOREIGN STOCKS

Trophy dash: 1, Dick Shead (Vancouver); 2, Roy Passmore; 3, Bent Siewertsen; 4, Ross McIntyre.
First main (15 laps): 1, Roy Passmore; 2, Dave Humphries; 3, Jo Steinicke; 4, Dick Shead.
Second main (15 laps): 1, Roy Passmore; 2, Ross McIntyre; 3, Jo Steinicke; 4, Dick Shead.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

STEWART LANG Reports on The Outdoors

Some timely advice for neophyte bowhunters has been received in a letter from E. Doug Wood, Vancouver Island representative of the B.C. Archery Association.

With only eight weekends remaining until the start of the bow and arrow-only hunting season on Vancouver Island (Aug. 28), Wood urges "all prospective bowhunters who have not yet bought their equipment to do so immediately, and get in all the practice they possibly can."

He points out that top bowhunters in North America estimate that a person should fire at least 2,000 arrows over various ranges before attempting to bag a game animal.

Responsibility for acquiring the skills which have given bowhunters an enviable record of practically no lost wounded game rests with the individual.

The only specific regulations imposed by the fish and wildlife branch on archers, in addition to the regular rules of the rifle-toter, are that the bow must have a pull greater than 40 pounds at full draw and the arrow must be tipped with a broadhead at least seven-eighths of an inch wide.

Crossbow hunters also fall under these specific regulations.

Wood goes on to announce that the BCAA will hold its annual bowhunt "in the Nimpkish Valley of Vancouver Island." This affair is open to all bowhunters and sportsmanship, clean camping and "good manners with respect to rules and regulations of the logging companies and game regulations are mandatory."

Novice bowhunters are further urged to join one of the local archery clubs now to polish up the fine points of shooting. The addresses of the Metchosin Bowmen, Victoria Bowmen, Seaview Archers as well as other local groups are available at most sporting goods stores.

But don't be too hopeful of success on the first hunting trip.

Wood says it well by stating that: "bowhunting is a quality sport not quantity."

If you are strictly after meat, stick to firearms. The average bowhunter only bags a big game animal once every three years.

"This is the challenge you face," says Wood.

NIBBLES: Speaking about the Metchosin Bowmen, they had some posters printed up carrying an appropriate message for the times: "Let no one say, and say it to your shame, that all was beauty here . . . until you came. Or toss your litter wide and far so the world can see what a pig you are."

For anyone interested in obtaining a copy of the study "Scientific Activities in Fisheries and Wildlife Resources" mentioned here last week . . . the price is cheap at $3.50 and the book may be ordered through your local bookseller or picked up from the Information Canada office at 657 Granville Street, Vancouver.

Andy Bell of Lake Cowichan got a lot for a little last weekend . . . fishing with wife Jenny near Beechy Head, Bell boated a 44-pound spring salmon using a herring for bait . . . it took him 45 minutes to land the fish, largest reported from local waters this year.

George Ferguson of the fish and wildlife branch noted this past week that new hunting regulations for the 1971-72 season should be on their way to distributors early next week . . . and should be available in the latter part of the week.

Fishing outlook for the weekend is excellent . . . Oak Bay, Pedder Bay and Becher Bay are still yielding husky spring salmon while coho and the odd spring are spicing action in up-Island waters, where best spots have been Frenchman's Pool, Cape Mudge, Butler Point, Deep Bay, French Creek, Northwest Bay, Five Fingers and Saturna Island.

Sox, Indians Set Up Race As Birds Slip

By The Associated Press

The on-again, off-again race in the American League East is on again.

Rico Petrocelli of Boston Red Sox and Cleveland Indians' Cada Pinson provided the latest ups and downs Thursday night with ninth-inning home runs that pulled Boston within 2½ games of Baltimore Orioles.

Petrocelli's homer, a three-run shot with one out in the ninth, sent the Red Sox winging past Detroit Tigers, 8-7, about one hour after Pinson's blast with two out in the ninth gave the Indians a 3-2 conquest of the Orioles.

Boston's latest upswing has put new fire into the race.

The same can't be said in the West where Kansas City Royals beat California Angels 7-2 and still stand 9½ games behind the idle leaders, Oakland Athletics.

YANKS TRIPPED

In other games, Washington Senators trimmed New York Yankees 3-1 and Chicago White Sox stopped Milwaukee Brewers 6-4.

Pittsburgh Pirates, who had yielded 54 runs in nine previous games, pushed in the plug to blank New York Mets 3-0 in National League play.

Elsewhere in the senior circuit, Cincinnati Reds swamped Philadelphia Phillies 5-1, San Francisco Giants edged St. Louis Cardinals 8-7, Atlanta Braves took Montreal Expos 7-3, and Los Angeles Dodgers ripped San Diego Padres 2-1. (See scored on Page 18).

HIT BY PITCH

Petrocelli's 12th homer into the upper left field deck came after Luis Aparicio was hit by a pitch and Reggie Smith singled, and marked the second time in the final two innings Boston came from behind.

Two runs had pulled the Sox even 5-5 in the eighth. But Detroit went right back ahead on run-scoring singles by Dick McAuliffe and Al Kaline in its half of the inning.

Then Petrocelli sent the Red Sox winging again, only one week after they had fallen eight games behind the Orioles and appeared lost.

Meanwhile, the Orioles sank to their sixth defeat in eight games after appearing to have things well in hand as Jim Palmer took a 2-0 lead into the eighth on Frank Robinson's homer and Don Buford's run-scoring single off Sam McDowell.

But Frank Baker doubled in two runs with two out to tie the game in the eighth, and then Pinson unloaded.

Palmer, who struck out 13, and McDowell, who fanned 11, each left after eight innings.

Amos Otis did the heavy hitting for Kansas City, belting a two-run homer, his 13th, in the first inning and doubling in one of four runs in the ninth. Dick Drago ran his record to 8-3 with a six-hitter as he beat the Angels for the third time this season.

Washington's Jim Shellenback kept the Yankees as his personal favorites as he set them down on four hits.

Limit Entry Ready For Cowichan Open

A limit entry of 132 golfers tees off Saturday in the opening round of the annual Cowichan Open golf tournament.

The 36-hole event at Cowichan Golf Club winds up with the final round Sunday.

Following is the draw, listing both Saturday (first) and Sunday starting times:

Neuman Fires Bakers' Oven

Glen Neuman blasted in seven goals to pace Victoria McDonald's Bread to a 28-5 victory over Coquitlam in a B.C. Junior "B" Lacrosse League game thursday night at Memorial Arena.

Jim Lynch provided some strong support with six goals and six assists. Other scorers for Victoria were Norm Baker (4), Darryl Hooker (3), Andy Reid (2), Jerry (Kustaski (2), Brian Gibson (2) and Dave Thomson (2).

Al Gillespie (2), Russ Wingrove (2) and Pat Clancy replied for Coquitlam.

In another game Thursday in Abbotsford, Kevin Alexander scored nine goals and assisted on three others while leading Saanich London Boxing Club to a 16-11 victory over Abbotsford.

Unbeaten Royals Face Biggest Test Saturday

Victoria Royals, though exaltant with their third shutout of the season against Vancouver Spartans on Wednesday, aren't expecting an easy time Saturday in a match against the high-flying Edmonton Eagles at Royal Athletic Park.

Royals defeated Spartans 1-0 in the Western Canada Soccer League's Coast Division tussle in Vancouver on Wednesday but even Victoria playing-coach Brian Hughes concedes that the Prairie Division visitors from Edmonton are "a big improvement on last season."

Edmonton has won six of its eight matches, including a two-game sweep over Spartans, and have drawn one.

SADLER MISSING

Part of the "improvement" is likely due to the inclusion of several Scottish and German players in Eagles' lineup.

Hughes said his biggest worry was finding a goalkeeper as Barry Sadler, who starred in the net for Victoria United of the Pacific Coast League, will not be available for the remainder of the summer.

Graham Lee, who played for Gorge of the Victoria and District League, earned the shutout Wednesday and will likely start for Royals again Saturday.

Royals are now undefeated in three matches against Spartans, having won the opener 3-0 in Victoria and played to a scoreless draw in the second at Vancouver.

BOLITHO SCORES

Royals lead the two-team Coast Division with five points while Spartans have one.

Right-winger Bob Bolitho scored the Royals' goal Wednesday at the 17-minute mark of the first half after collecting a pass from Ash Valdal. Bolitho later missed another chance when he hit the crossbar on a penalty kick.

Hughes also had some sad news. Royals have made attempts to sign Ike MacKay, leading scorer in the PCSL, but now it has been officially announced that the United star has signed with Spartans.

MacKay didn't play Wednesday but is expected to turn out for the next match.

City Cyclists on B.C. Team

Three members of the Victoria Wheelers bicycle club have been selected to the 14-man British Columbia contingent which will compete in the Canadian championships July 10 in Ottawa.

Victoria's Tom Morris and Ian Whale of Parksville were the Wheelers picked for the senior team. Riders completing the six-man squad are all from Vancouver. They are Max Grace (defending champion), Roger Sumner, Lorne Kernan and George Streadwick.

Karl Fawthorpe was the oly Islander picked for the eight-man junior team. Others, all from Vancouver, are Ron Hayman, Ed McRae, Mark Akerstream, Hugh Harden, Jim Gormican, Dave Gill and Brian Keast.

Ted McRae of Vancouver, chairman of the Canadian Cycling Association B.C. Racing Committee which made the selections, and Don Fanthorpe of Victoria will manage the provincial squads.

The senior event will cover 102 miles while the junior test is 52 miles in length.

Morris, Whale and Karl Fawthorpe will be in Vancouver this weekend to compete in the national track-racing championships.

INTER-PROVINCIAL TOURNEY . . . . . . OPENS HERE SUNDAY

Quebec Cricketers Defending Trophy

Many of Canada's brightest bowling and batting stars will be in action on Victoria pitches Sunday when three matches launch the annual round-robin competition for the interprovincial cricket championship.

Four pitches will be used during the week-long event as representative sides from six provinces bid for the Hiram Walker Trophy, won last year by Quebec.

Challenging Quebec's reign as champion will be teams from British Columbia, Ontario, Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba.

Fifteen matches are scheduled in the week-long tournament, which ends on Saturday July 10. Six are slated for Beacon Hill Park, three for University School, three for Windsor Park and three for Shawnigan Lake Boys' School.

Hours of play will be from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. each day with a lunch break from 1 to 1:40 p.m. and a tea break from 3:40 to 4 p.m.

British Columbia meets Alberta at Windsor Park, Saskatchewan tackles Ontario at Beacon Hill Park and Quebec faces Manitoba at University School in opening matches on Sunday.

Three points will be awarded for a win, two for a tie and one for a draw in the tourney. In the event of a tie, the trophy will be shared.

Five players from the Victoria and District Association — fast bowlers Chris Rowe, Allan Carter and Alec Porter of Albions as well as batsmen Dave Clarke and Dave Auld of Castaways — have been included on the B.C. side, which is managed by by Tim Brierly of Cowichan.

Pearce Again Wins in Relief

Brian Pearce threw his second straight victory in relief Thursday as Bate Construction defeated Strathcona Hotel 3-1 at Central Park to take a four-game lead in the Victoria Major Men's Softball League.

Pearce came to the mound in the fourth inning after starter Ken Larson had allowed two hits and yielded only a home run to Norm Ellemo in the remainder of the nine-inning contest.

Larson scored the first run for Bates with a solo homer in the third inning and Ellemo's homer sent the game into extra time.

Doug Boden scored the second Bate run in the ninth inning after drawing a base on balls, advancing to second on a sacrifice fly by Lyall Cornett and streaking home on a single by catcher Bill James.

James advanced to second on an overthrow and then scored the insurance run on an error.

Pearce struck out six batters after Larson had retired five on strikes. Loser Geoff Hett struck out 11 batters.

Islanders Lose Trap Shootoff

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP)—Jim Thompson of Toronto broke 25 straight in a shoot-off with five others to win the Jim Boa Handicap Thursday, opening day of the 16th annual Canadians Trapshooting Championships.

Thompson, a member of the Triangle Trap Club, edged teenager Susan Nattrass of Edmonton, who had one miss in the shoot-off.

Thompson has a handicap of 19½ yards, while Miss Nattrass shoots from a distance of 24½ yards.

Tied with Thompson and Miss Nattrass with 97 hits in the first 100 traps were Stu Bird of Edmonton, Shane Whynot of Calgary, Bob Hopkins of Cowichan, and Norm Young of Port Alberni.

The first half of the class championship was held with six shooters breaking 100 and 14 checking in with 99s.

Miss Nattrass had a 100, as did fellow Edmontonian Joe St. Arnaud, Jim Callihan of Longview, Wash., Bob Mays of Cloverdale, B.C. Bob Caldwell of North Vancouver and Dick Hornby, also of Cloverdale.

Upwards of 400 shooters are expected for the competition which continues today with the national doubles championship on the line.

The Canadian singles championship and Canadian handicap are set Saturday and Sunday.

Thunderbird Challengers Prep for Big One

While it will be cruising and fishing time for most boaters this weekend local skippers and crews who will be competing in the World's Thunderbird Championships, to be held here July 10 to 16, will be readying themsevles for battle of the giants.

Some of the giants who will be in the 43-strong fleet of competing boats are already here.

Bob Jensen and his 16-year-old son, Scott of Napa, Calif. arrived June 26 and Jensen is busy tuning Sultana, loaned him by George Trusk of Seattle, for the international sailout.

Jensen alread has a triple-crown to his credit — three times champion for the San Francisco Bay area.

Moonraker II, the Thunderbird owned by Dr. Tony Parkes of Sydney, Australia, arrived in Vancouver Tuesday aboard the roll-on roll-off ship Paralla. Malcolm Faivell of the West Vancouver Yacht Club is readying her for the trip across the Gulf to Victoria.

Parkes won the world's championships last year in Sydney and will be here to defend his title.

Another hot contender will be Harry Tanker Jones of Bowman ville, Ont. He was Ontario Y-Flier champion in 1966, 1967, 1968 and 1969, has been runner-up three times for international champion in this class and made the Canadian Olympic sailing team in 1956.

If that isn't enough to have other skippers watching him like a hawk, he was also a Mallory Cup semi-finalist in 1960 and 1961 and won the championship of his own Thunderbird fleet last year.

A few of the keener racing types will be in Vancouver this weekend to take part in the PIYA regatta at the West Vancouver Yacht Club. Among them is Peter Young of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club. Crewing with him in Zest will be Malcolm Anderson and former Queen's Harbormaster Stan Howell.

The Victoria Cruising Club will be carrying on a weekend of cruising that started Thursday when many of them attended the annual lamb barbeque on Saturna Island.

Saturday will see them tying up at Ladysmith and gathering for dinner at the Manyana Lodge. On the way home they'll stop off at Crofton Sunday for a swim — Let's hope that's all of that wet stuff that will be drenching them this weekend!

Depending on weather conditions, between 10 and 15 canoes are expected to be out for a tour of the Sooke basin by members of the Victoria Canoe Club. Excursion leader Tom Smith reports gathering time is 9:30 a.m. at Anglesea, arrived at by turning left on the Sooke Road by Saseena School.

Most meetings run the risk of being dull, at least, in spots. Not so the VCC's next one, slated for Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Before getting down to business, members will relax at a picnic, to be held on the sandy beach near Thetis Lake at 6:30 p.m., heading out to the meeting room an hour later — a small island on the lake! Those needing water-borne transportation will be taken over by volunteer ferrymen.

Last weekend was one of near-misses for two local sailing crews and success for John Ganton of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association.

Last Saturday Ganton won the right to compete in the O'Day Championship finals by winning the North American single-handed elimination races here, beating out Corey Kimball, of Hawaii, using OK dinghies.

Ganton will go to the Pleon Yacht Club in Marblehead, Mass. in September to complete in the finals.

Racing in San Juan 21s, Louise Anstey of Royal Vic. lost by a ¼ point in Tacoma the right to compete in the finals for the Adams Cup, to be held in Portland, Maine, in September. She ended as runner-up in competition which included crews from Vancouver, Seattle, Tacoma and Hawaii. Crewing with her were Liz Holland, Shirley Jefferson and Joanne Oliver, spare.

Another Royal Vic. crew had to settle for second place by a narrow margin on the weekend in Hawaii. Dennis Woodward, 17, racing in 18-foot centre-board Thistles, lost out to an Hawaiian crew as finalist for the Sears Cup championships, which will be run at Annapolis, Mld. in September. Woodward, who had Dave Richardson and Alan McGillivray as crew, beat out four crews from Hawaii and another from Seattle.

SHORT TACKS — Four executives were named this week by the Canadian Challenge Syndicate in Vancouver, who will be making Canada's bid for world yachting supremacy in the 1974 America's Cup competition. George B. Donaldson was named chairman in charge of management and direction and Kenneth Reid, technical committee chairman. John A. Kaye will head the syndicate's fund-raising campaign and Steven Tupper, teacher at a Burnaby high school, will be in charge of selecting crew.

Bicycle Track Will Be Ready

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian cycling trace championships will go ahead as scheduled this weekend after facing possible postponement due to lack of a track.

Ted Mcrae, head of the British Columbia section of the Canadian Cycling Association, said the group has been assured that resurfacing of the China Creek cycling oval will be finished in time for the championships Saturday and Sunday.

The track, one of only two outdoor championship courses in Canada, was built in 1954 for the British Empre Games.

Winners' Car Stopped Dead on Them In Race So Tough, Half Dropped Out

By IAN HAMILTON

What can you say about an 18-month-old car that almost died?

Ask its 35-year-old driver shortly after stepping out of the vehicle in first place at the end of the week-long Centennial '71 car rally. The answer is "Love Story," but without the unhappy ending.

"This rally was the roughest I've ever been in or heard about," said Hayden Gozzard, one half of the London, Ont., private entry which walked off with $3,000 of the $15,000 in prize and contingency money. "I'm not driving this thing back home, mainly because it wouldn't go another 500 miles."

Driving a Renault Gordini, Gozzard and navigator David Grundy, 26, lost 638 points to finish with a whopping 137 points margin under Tom Samida and Brian Fox of Ann Arbour, Mich., in second.

The American AMC Hornet entry, in turn, won about $1,750 excluding contingency awards in comparison to $1,300 for third-place finishers George Wirtjes of Toronto and Robert Baker of Richmond Hill in a Mazda.

As Gozzard and Grundy pulled up at "mile zero" of the Ottawa-to-Victoria rally at Douglas and Dallas Road shortly after noon, the congratulations of numerous well-wishers fell on tired, happy and, as they agreed, lucky ears.

Of 38 entries to leave Ottawa's Lansdowne Park in the midst of an Ottawa Rough Rider exhibition football game eight days before, only 17 teams managed to fight the weather and roads to a Victoria finish.

"Had the race been any tougher," said Gozzard, making it plain the only way his dust-covered Renault was ever going to make it back to Ontario was by rail, "no one would have finished."

He knows he almost didn't. Five miles away from the Nanaimo ferry early Wednesday morning his car stopped running because of mechanical difficulties. The winners might never have crossed the finishing line if it hadn't been for swift repair action from a local Renault representative.

With 70 per cent of the rally taking place on some of the worst road conditions organizers could muster up to test the mettle of the drivers and their cars, the high degree of mechanical difficulty was just what had official Jim Gunn ordered.

Tires, brakes, suspensions and major components of every car took a pounding and the weatherman threw in ideal conditions for testing, with a great deal of rain and sleet barring drivers' progress through the provincial capitals to the west coast.

Last Friday, with the event one-third over, Gozzard and Grundy pulled into Sault Ste. Marie in the lead of a 31-car pack. The weather at that time was all bad as well, with a driving rainstorm hindering progress.

By the time they hit Edmonton on Tuesday, 28 cars were left and Gunn was quoted as saying he was happy there was nothing but trouble so far and hoping it would get worse.

'I'm not driving this thing back home because it wouldn't go another 500 miles'

It did. The route from Jasper to just north of Kamloops provided the most inclement weather of all because "it rained and rained and rained."

And while up till that time the lead had changed hands numerous times, even the favorites were falling by the wayside. Mechanical problems dropped Bruce and Betty Schmidt's Fiat entry from vying for first to an eventual finish in eighth. They were the top finishers among factory team competitors, as private entries accounted for all the glory of the top spots.

Finishing in fourth place was Katherine Edmond of Ottawa and Bill Montgomery of Downsview, Ont., in a Datsun with 1,251 points. The pair picked up $1,050 in prize money, including the mixed-couple award.

Wolf Bergelt of West Vancouver and Craig Sanderson of Burnaby finished fifth in a Volkswagen with 1,301 points.

Jock Wilson of Cheltenham, Ont., and Bob Lindquirt of Don Mills, Ont., won $750 as the only drivers of a Class 3 auto to finish. Driving a Mercedes Benz, a fellow driver said they were dark horses, not expected to finish in their diesel-engine vehicle.

The only team to benefit from the poor conditions was Wirtjes and Baker. Starting the rally badly, they managed to work themselves up to ninth spot by the time they hit Jasper.

By steady driving through the mountains, they watched competitor after competitor drop off as they climbed to their third-place finish.

The rally was one of the biggest in North America with regard to prize money and one of the longest in the world. It was given full international status by the Federation de l'automobile in Paris, France.

But there was more to the affair than competition, with three medical personnel using the drivers as experimental subjects for testing the effects of driver fatigue. Dr. Pat Goodhall, Joan Bennett, a psychologist, and Ruth Medwell, a biologist, spent the week in putting the competitors through a number of tests which will help them in a study.

The winners were presented with prizes in a ceremony outside the legislative buildings in the early evening after a celebration party at The Empress.

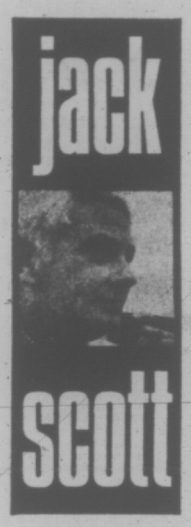
LONE WITNESS

My Day in Court —Free, At Last!

Reginald J. Moir, of Kelowna, my oldest friend, has been visiting us this week and he couldn't have picked a more inopportune time. Reg is now Judge Moir, of the provincial court of that pleasant city, and if ever there was a week when I wanted no reminders of the complexities of jurisprudence this was it.

Clutched in my hot little hand on the very day of his arrival was a summons to appear as a witness in a case involving two motorists who reached a Fairfield intersection with but a single thought, namely the utter conviction that the other fellow would concede the right of away. Two of us — my maiden aunt and me — were the sole spectators of the resultant collision and since my maiden aunt is somewhat short-sighted the police had settled on me as the single witness.



In almost no time at all the case had taken on the proportions of the Dreyfus trial in my imagination and Reg was no comfort whatever in preparing me for my first and only day in court. One did encounter witnesses, he assured me, who were inclined to babble incoherently or even faint dead away and one or both fates seemed altogether likely in the case of a man who is seized with anxieties by simply attending a Parent-Teachers meeting.

True, my part in this litigation promised to be fleeting. I was to testify, it appeared, merely on the speed of the offending vehicle, an appearance, I was assured, that might last for two minutes. Still, as the fateful day approached I began to suspect that a great deal more was in store for me. I've seen too many episodes of Perry Mason, the Bold Ones and Men at Law to be lulled into false security. Judge Moir's reminder of the maxim, Testis unus testis nullus ("a single witness is no witness") was hardly soothing, either.

It occurred to me, for example, that I might be asked for my qualifications as a judge of speed. There would surely be a Smart Young Attorney Out to Make a Name for Himself, I figured, and in my recurring fantasies I could hear him sardonically demanding, "You are, I take it, a student of such matters?" The very thought of it was chilling. He'd have me there, all right.

But then the whole image changed in my mind. I saw myself casually flicking the lint from my lapels and murmuring modestly, "In a minor way, my dear sir, you might call me an expert. You see I am retained by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the United Nations as a consultant in the matter of speeds, particularly in the sonic range."

I could almost hear the appreciative titters from the spectators' gallery as the attorney, dumbfounded, took his seat in total confusion, his case hopelessly blasted. In fact I gave a little chuckle, myself, which caused my wife to glance sharply at me across the dinner table.

Somehow I'd come to think of my maiden aunt as The Woman In The Case. There is always a Woman In The Case in Perry Mason, as any fool knows. Again I seemed to hear the voice of my inquisitor: "Now, this woman you claim to have been escorting . . ."

"My Lord Chief Justice," I replied in a voice like granite, eyes blazing. "My learned friend is attempting to reduce this case to a trial of womanhood. I am delighted to accept his challenge. As I look about this court of justice today and see the shining faces of these mothers and wives I feel that I may rest my case . . ." The speech went on for a very long time above the muffled sobs of the spectators.

By Tuesday I had got around to the purely legal aspects of the case. Again I went through some unnerving daydreams of being cited for perjury or worse, but once more a reciprocating fancy came to my rescue. I imagined myself peering down at the prosecutor with a faint, superior twinkle in my eye as he stumbled through some murky point of law.

"You have something to say about this, Mr. Scott?" I heard the judge asking, ever so clearly.

"Very little, my lord," I replied coolly, "except to remind Your Lordship that a question of habeas corpus hardly applies. I should think it more one of res judicata which holds under such writs of mandamus and on that I direct Your Lordship's attention to the matter of tort . . . and retort!"

Well, sir, they were carrying me from the court on their shoulders after that. I was free, Johnny, free!

By Wednesday I was alternately convinced that I would either be struck dumb in the witness box or erupt into a flow of language unparalleled since Disraeli.

Indeed, I had begun to see the case not merely as a commonplace traffic mishap, but as one striking a fierce blow at the heart of free men everywhere.

"In this simple little case," I heard myself intoning (the reporters' pencils racing to record each polished word), "in this simple little case we see the whole fabric of our democracy. To paraphrase Voltaire, I disagree with the plaintiff's opinions, but I will fight to the death for his right to hold them. These are times, My Lord Chief Justice, when we must examine not merely our minds, but our hearts. I am reminded of . . ."

So it went right up until the fateful morning when I sat, palpitating, awaiting my call, and a very large policeman approached me, causing me to leap to my feet with a truly terrible smile.

"They won't be needing you," he said. "Case is over."

"Very well, my lord," I croaked and stumbled blindly into the cell block.

Building Resumes At Manor Site

Blasting resumed today at the site of the multi-million-dollar Oak Bay Manor retirement centre after the builders, National Nursing Homes Ltd., pulled out of their management contract with strike-bound Sandringham Private Hospital.

A spokesman for Inter-Island Construction Ltd. said drilling and dynamiting would continue today and Saturday, and other excavating equipment would be moved back to the site Monday.

Pickets supporting striking nurses' aides at Sandringham had halted work at the Oak Bay Manor site Tuesday and Wednesday. There were no pickets there this morning.

National Nursing Homes negotiated last summer with the Sandringham strikers, who are seeking their first contract as a local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, since the 28 employees walked out last Sept. 30.

'NOT WORTH EFFORT'

Hospital administrator Margaret Reynolds said today the company had pulled out of its management role because the picketing at the manor site had made it "not worth the effort."

Management responsibility at the hospital will be assumed by the owners, Russell Shepherd of Vancouver and Jack McGill of Calgary.

The management switch was played down by Alex Markides, CUPE staff representative in the labor dispute. He said there had been "no real change" because Shepherd and McGill "have always been there."

"We hope, however, that one or both of them will take a look at the situation and negotiate with us to finalize an agreement."

'SWAP' DENIED BY UNIONS

Police Give Up Right to Strike

Greater Victoria police unions will give up their right to strike over a new contract, but the two major police commissions indicated today they will not close off the option of proceeding to the B.C. Mediation Commission if there is no settlement under mediator Clark Gilmour.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of the municipal police commission, said today he still believes the "appropriate and correct route" is through the mediator and mediation commission "unless I'm shown good reasons why not."

He also said he is "still adamant I will not negotiate through the media."

For the first time, he disclosed the Saanich commission's last offer to the Saanich Police Association. It called for increases in salary of 5 per cent on Jan. 1, 1971, 5 per cent July 1, 1971, and 5 per cent Jan. 1, 1972, in an 18-month contract. He said the association's negotiating committee rejected this.

Victoria police commission chairman, Mayor Courtney Haddock, said only that he is "quite sure . . that it will be settled with commonsense and reason."

At a joint meeting Wednesday night, the Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt police unions agreed to give up the right to strike and hoped the police commissions would relinquish their right to go before the B.C. mediation commission.

A spokesman for the unions, C. O. D. Branson, denied one published report that this was a "swap." He said the unions agreed to give up the strike right unconditionally.

Part of a statement issued on behalf of the unions said they "go on record as relinquishing their right to strike in hopes that the respective police commissions will be equally responsible and relinquish their right to go before the mediation commission."

The statement also said that if the police commissions don't agree not to go before the mediation commission, the unions will ask Labor Minister James Chabot for independent arbitration and will not appear before the commission.

The key reason, given in the statement, was that the unions "don't have confidence in the mediation commission." The commission set the pattern for Greater Victoria police salaries with a 1969 settlement which widened the gap with Vancouver.

Firemen, City Hall Stalemated

Wage negotiations between Victoria firemen and city hall appear stalemated today following flat rejection by each side of the other's contract proposal.

Union president Fred Severson said he has not formally met with city negotiators, but has notified them the membership has turned the city's offer down.

This offer consisted mainly of a two-year contract with four five-per-cent raises, a proposal identical to that offered Victoria police and similar to agreements already reached with city hall outside and inside staff.

Severson said also the city "certainly turned us down flat" on the union's attempt to get a five-year contract on wages reaching parity with Vancouver in 1975.

Severson said he does not think talks have deteriorated completely, but the city's proposal included elimination of some fringe benefits. A meeting may be held at the end of next week.

First-class firemen earn $691 a month, five per cent below the Vancouver rate before that city's contract was settled at a new figure of $849.

arthur mayse

BACK WHEN THE YEAR was younger, a planner of residential towers offered a self-evident truth for Victorians to consider. Very many people, he pointed out, love cities and would be unhappy if exiled from them. But there are others to whom close-packed communities offer only disillusionment and starvation of the spirit. These endure while they must, and escape when they can.

One escape route leads to the commune.

You are, let us suppose, young, idealistic, and fed to the teeth with life as it confronts you. It may also be that you are deeply convinced that man by his abuse of nature is signing his own death warrant. With others of like mind, you borrow, lease or buy a few remote acres where you can follow your own life-style at peace with yourself and in harmony with the good earth.

There is no guarantee, of course, that the actuality of commune life may follow this somewhat visionary script. Some communes are no more than rural crash-pads, without aims, coherent program or future.

Not all such attempts fail, however. I'm told that perhaps half a dozen are achieving success on their own terms on one island or another of our Inside Passage string.

One communard group of about 14 young men and women is working a 20-acre farm. Its members grow their own food, and are building their own houses. For part of each year, some of them work on jobs that provide what cash the commune needs.

It's early to guess what the future holds for these colonizers who have embraced an old idea.

It's possible that what they've started in their remote location may conceivably expand through the years into a town, and thereby undo the intent of the founders.

In any case, they are committed to the search for Utopia that has occupied others before them on the British Columbia coast.

In proof that one company of seekers achieved a pretty fair approximation of their dream, the trim and tiny fishing village of Sointula stands sturdily above its harbor on Malcolm Island not far from Alert Bay. Today, 70 years after the first hardy Finlanders put in at the island, Sointula is still populated almost entirely by Canadians of Finish extraction.

Its name signifies "Place of Harmony", and though harmony has not always prevailed there, Sointula earned the distinction of being British Columbia's first successful commune.

It owes its existence to the disappointment of immigrants who came to the New World expecting a better life than the Vancouver Island coal-towns held for them. They found a stern and fiery prophet in Matti Kurikka, set up a colonization scheme on co-operative lines and obtained a land grant from the provincial government.

More than once the colony teetered on the edge of disaster. But it survived, and in due time, made peace with capitalist doctrine to the point of approving private ownership of homes, boats and gear.

There have been Indian utopias, like the closed and secret village of China Hat. And south of Nanaimo, at Cedar and in the De Courcey islands, a strange little man once established a utopia in reverse.

He was a sect leader of many aliases, but he won notoriety as Brother Twelve. Most of the over-trustful converts to his Aquarian Foundation were well-heeled women, from whom Brother Twelve extracted slavish obedience and many thousands of dollars.

In the late 1920s, a rift in the Aquarian Foundation landed its leader in court in Nanaimo. But Brother Twelve went free, to dominate his remaining disciples and eventually skip the country.

Washington State also had its utopias. These flourished for a while, then fell apart. May today's communards do the thing better!

TEACHER 'HOVERS'

Children Teach Class

By GLENNIS ZILM

EDMONTON (CP) — A British education expert wants to shove teachers into the background and replace them with children.

To back his idea, he allows his pupils to make their own educational films for presentation in the schools.

"In getting a point across to a young child, another child is one of the best communicants and one of the best teachers," Leslie Ryder of London's Educational Authority said Tuesday.

"Research is showing that the best learning situation is three children of mixed abilities with materials and the teacher just hovering there ready to inject other materials," he said in an interview at the Canadian Educational Communications Conference.

Mr. Ryder spoke to about 500 delegates earlier, using some of the audiovisual materials prepared by students in London schools that come under the educational authority.

ALL GET CAMERAS

Even young children taken on field trips from their school are given movie and still cameras and allowed to make presentations for other classes, he said. Often what fascinates a child might have gone unnoticed by the adult teachers.

"The whole move . . . is not only to use these aids as resources which the children can learn from, but also to learn by using them to create material that other children can use."

Mr. Ryder warned that merely having modern technological aids is not enough. For example, he described a television program set up to teach mathematics, using a highly qualified professor.

The program was a failure because it was authoritarian, had only one-way communication and there was loss of individualism, he said.

In another presentation Tuesday, Thomas Ferguson, assistant librarian at the Toronto public library, described the "plugged-in library."

The time is coming when people will be able to retrieve any items of information they want from the library through computer terminals in their homes, he said. A pilot project in Boston was setting up this kind of electronic information centre.

This centre also will have 25 educational television channels, one carrying news broadcasts 24-hours-a-day.

BARBER SYRT ON HAIR COLOURING

Becoming almost as important as styling is hair colouring. Now a mousy-haired man who likes narrow or flare trousers and paisley shirts, can have a rinse to give him a darker, more dashing appearance. It is not uncommon for men to have a weekly rinse, mostly to subdue or highlight graying streaks. Many prematurely graying men are interested in tints because business promotions often go to the younger or younger-looking men.

Club News

Exchange Teachers — Doreen Radcliff has been elected president of the Victoria Branch of the Commonwealth Exchange Teachers' Club. Other officers are Henry Ruckle, vice president; Frankie Roberts, secretary; Neil Hughes, treasurer; Mary Saich, Avril McMillan and Win McKenzie, program; Jessie Fleming, publicity; Rosalie Frampton and Florence Brookes, editors and Erica Porter, past president and social.

Four Victoria teachers will go on exchange next year. They are Ron Milton, to Wimbledon, England; Isabel Coux, to Hereford, England; Ron Berod, to the Yukon, and Phil Fawcett, to Dundee, Scotland. Teachers from those places will come to Victoria.

Woman Grad

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP) — The first female graduate from the drafting technology course at Saskatchewan Technical Institute was Annette Marie Mansiere of Meskanaw, Sask. She was among 184 graduates who received diplomas at the annual convocativn.

CENTENNIAL COSTUMES will be on view when the Victoria Christian Women's Club executive hold a garden luncheon Wednesday from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. McGill, 3441 Mayfair Drive. Helen Biernes, standing at the right, will present the costumes, some of which are modeled by Mrs. McGill, centre, Arla Rendle, and Libby Horwood, seated. The program will also include a talk by Mrs. Philip Doran of Seattle, who has recently returned from the Far East, and music by the Brigademen Quartet.

Different Knits Explained

Dear Eunice Farmer,

Please tell us the difference between a single knit and a doubit knit. I wasn't aware there was a difference except by the weight of the knit. — Mrs. A. V.

Dear Mrs. A. V.:

Double knits are made with t double set of needles, giving double thickness to the fabric. It is difficult to distinguish the right from the wrong side, unless the fabric is textured or patterned. Double knits are heavier weight than single knits and they drape softly, yet tailor beautifully. The most popular fibres are wool, polyester, and wool-synthetic blends.

Single knits are made with a single set of needles and sometimes with only one yarn. The fabric has a definite right and wrong side. Single knits are usually lightweight with good stretch and recovery. They are made in a broad range of fibres, wool, cotton, synthetic blends.

Best-known single knits are jersey: a soft, drapey, supple knit in a plain stitch, either wool or synthetic. Matte jersey has a brushed surface. Tricot is a very lightweight, run resistant knit made on a warp knitting machine which interlocks each loop above, below, and sideways. This is used for lingerie as well as outerwear and is usually made from acetate, triacetate or nylon. Cire is a nylon tricot with a shiny, wet-looking finish.

An Attitude

TORONTO (CP) — Gisela Naunin, president of the National Council of Women in Germany, feels that women's liberation in her country is a matter of attitude rather than law. A former lawyer, Mrs. Naunin has been on a lecture tour across Canada and the United States and was in Toronto recently.

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a man, 64 years old. I retired two years ago and I am very lonely. You see, my wife, who is 60, took a job selling in a retail store some years back because she wanted to do something more exciting than just housework. Her selling job paid poorly, but she never quit because she says she enjoys selling. Her boss is about 50, and she eats up his flattery. She enjoys the attention of any man who is younger than I am.

I had hoped that after my retirement my wife and I could travel and live out our golden years in pleasure and relaxation, but she refuses to quit her job. She has no appreciation for the security I have worked all my life to provide for her.

Should I dissolve our marriage now and try to find some lady who would be happy to give up her job to travel and enjoy retirement with me? Lonely in K.C.

DEAR LONELY: Perhaps if you put it to your wife just that way, your problem would be solved. She's a foolish woman to spend her days "selling" while you are free to spend your days "Shopping."

DEAR ABBY: My husband is of Italian descent and he has a friend who is also Italian. His name is Dino. When Dino comes over, which is quite often lately, the two of them greet each other with a warm embrace, and they kiss like a man would kiss a woman. My husband tells me that this is an old Italian custom, as the Italians are very affectionate people. I am not Italian, but I have known a lot of Italians and I have never seen this done by two men.

My husband and I are both middle-age and have been married less than two year, and he shows more enthusiasm when he kisses Dino than when he kisses me. Should I worry? Rhode Island Reader.

DEAR READER: Affectionate men of all nationalities will sometimes greet each other with a firm embrace. But kissing "like a man would kiss a woman" is something else. Worrying won't help. Ask your husband to state his preference.

DEAR ABBY: A young woman I've been dating for several months has just informed me that nothing is going to come of our little romance. That doesn't bother me nearly as much as her reason. She said — now get this, "You are too nice a guy."

Abby, why is it that today's women want a man who treats them rough? Must a man slap a woman around to prove that he is a man? I certainly hope not because I never could mistreat a woman, and doubt if I will ever change.

Please don't get the idea that I am some poor slob who has trouble getting dates because I'm not.

Who said, "'Nice guys finish last?" He sure knew what he was talking about. Too Nice.

DEAR TOO: Leo Durocher said it. But don't you believe it. (Leo is far from "finished" himself, so how would he know?)

DEAR ABBY: They have something new now. Instead of throwing rice at newlyweds as they leave the church, they throw tiny tissue paper hearts. These "hearts" come in a variety of colors and are about the size of a quarter. (I am enclosing one.) They cling to the trees, and they litter the church property until somebody cleans them up.

Rice was so much cleaner, could be enjoyed by the birds and what was left dissolved easily. But those little tissue paper hearts create such a terrible mess — just like confetti! Maybe if you will print this, it will help. Minister, Pa.

DEAR MINISTER: I'm antilitter, too. But why waste good rice?

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Maurice J. Keyser, a clinical psychologist in the Michigan Corrections Department reception centre for new inmates at Jackson State Prison, is currently utilizing an astrological technique in an effort to discover whether there is a correlation between zodiacal signs and the prisoners he has been interviewing. His findings seem to indicate that the day you're born might have some bearing on whether you'll end up in prison.

SATURDAY, JULY 3

ARIES (March 21-April 19): This is unusual for you—but wave of indecisiveness appears to engulf. Key is to take inventory. Don't expect something for nothing. Scorpio individual figures prominently. Don't rush.

TARUS (April 20-May 20): Study Aries message. There are past duties, obligations which you have apparently neglected. Accent is on unique agreement. May involve mate or business associate. Be receptive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some restrictions are due to boomerang in your favor. No one is picking on you. You merely are going through a period of self-pity. Snap out of it. Laugh again.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Creative juices flow; make most of this dynamic period. Forgive cliche, but you could now sell an icebox to an Eskimo. Be ready for some abrupt, surprising annuncements.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your sense of values is put to test. No one is going to tell you what to do. It will be necessary for you to make own decisions. Freedom is not easy. You will know it — soon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Close relatives make claims which are not necessarily based on factual information. Be wary in traffic. You exhibit tendency to be careless at crucial times. Avoid it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money and how it gets that way appears to be current concern. You have a right to be rewarded for efforts. This has nothing to do with loss of integrity. Know it and act accordingly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Recognition, perhaps long overdue, comes your way. Accept — be proud without being arrogant. Be gracious winner. Lunar cycle is high; you're on right track. Take initiative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are overdramatizing an event which, if truth be known, is quite ordinary. Have fun but don't deceive yourself. You are lovely, charming, but not really irresistible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some of your desires may have to be held in abeyance until family situation is resolved. Indications, however, point to ultimate success in fulfillment of hopes, wishes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some of your more conservative associates feel you are rocking the boat. Stick to principles. Ultimately, your views will be vindicated. Sense of humor aids. Goal is in sight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You seem to be torn between what is apparently practical as opposed to the imaginative. Strike a balance. Relaize 60 seconds from now will be the first minute of the rest of your life.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY this month represents one of the most important periods of the year for you. You now are able to exhibit greater independence of thought, responsibility. Applies to personal and professional areas. Some claim you are close with your money; in fact, however, you seldom skimp when it comes to welfare of loved ones.

"SPACE AGE" BARTENDING a method of electronically dispensing seven exact drinks in under 10 seconds, came to Victoria this week. Sales representative Gary Tennent shows how it's done in a demonstration Tuesday at the Olde England Inn.

Pub Owners Cast Critical Eye At Automatic Drink Dispenser

By IAN HAMILTON

The man with the smile on his face and something to sell waltzed up to the bar, pushed a cocktail glass up to a button under one of several spigots and won yet another free-loader over to "space age" bartending.

Bellies up to the bar, boys — it's hard to argue with progress, especially when it's accompanied by double shots of the oh-be-jollies.

Sam Owen, president of Owen and Sons Cash Registers Ltd. on Government, was in the process of introducing his product to the media and hotel representatives Tuesday at the Olde England Inn.

As B.C. distributors for "Action Bar Control Systems," his company thinks they've got something and they can't wait to demonstrate it.

"Now what would you like?" said Owen, as he swept his fingers along a row of labels above several spigots behind the bar.

Order taken and button pushed, an exact shot of vodka slid out into a glass as the nearby cash register dingled up another sale automatically and spewed out a receipt.

There were no booze bottles in sight, all being conveniently hidden in a room behind the bar and connected by tubing and pressure to the man at the buttons.

Mozoltov and welcome, bar flies, to pubs of the future. A check with various bars in Victoria reveals a degree of skepticism about the concept, however, as bartenders in general do not appear overly excited about the prospects for electronic bartending.

"On a high-speed bar it would be a help," said one bar manager who admitted he had never seen this particular model. "It would eventually pay for itself. But there's not a machine you can't beat with your hands and most people still like to see a bartender build a drink for them.

Sorry about that, Sam.

Owen and fellow host Gary Tennent are naturally the first people you'd expect to disagree with this kind of thinking and they say there's a good chance the first models will be in Victoria drinking places with the next few months. They feel their model has none of the flaws of similar bartending units.

Time and money, the two staples of business life, are the main reasons why the two feel confident in this booze business battle between old and new methods.

The electronic system measures and dispenses exact portions of liquor in the exact ratio every time, they say, up to seven drinks in under 10 seconds, and saves the vendor one ounce of every 25 because there's no spillage.

Tennent claims the average Victoria hotel could save about $10,000 a year, which is just short of the cost of the equipment, if it purchases. The machine can be leased at $8.50 per day.

No one in the city has purchased or leased one yet, but Owen says they're selling like hotcakes in the U.S. He says there are 50 already installed and another 300 outstanding orders.

Its been in Canada only a month with a demonstration in Vancouver two weeks ago and visits are slated for other Canadian centes in the coming weeks. The machine can mix over 200 different drinks at the bat of an eyelash.

It sounds as if the price paid for progress in future may be no more than the cost of a drink from a mechanical bartender.

Unless you're deeply involved in the temperance movement, that's not much of a price to pay at all.

Talked It Over

CONGRESBURY, England (CP) — Widow Lillian Slaughter woke up one night face to face with a burglar in her Cornwall home. Not one to panic in a crisis, 82-year-old Lillian introduced herself and started up a conversation with him. She promised not to go to the police and they had a cup of tea together before he left — empty-handed.

elizabeth forbes

First let me say I do not believe in strikes nor do I believe in picket lines. Further let me add that if I was in such a position I would not vote for a strike nor would I walk in a picket line.

Having written this I have no doubt there will be those who label the rest of my column as biased. I also have no doubt some readers will remind me that in the past I have not written too kindly of private hospital enterprises.

Nevertheless, in the case of the present Sandringham Hospital fracas, I'm all on the side of the hospital.

I believe that the 18 or so women who accepted work in that hospital and who are now walking in a picket line outside the same place, must have known when they first went there what the wages, hours of work and other working conditions were.

I also think that if they were not satisfied they were free to seek employment anywhere else where their qualifications would be acceptable. That is—and should be—the right of any one working in the labor force today.

On the other side of the coin, of course, it is surely the rights of the owner of a business to operate in whatever manner he chooses — subject only to the requirements of the department of health regulations.

If, in the operation of that business, no one will work under the conditions as outlined, then the owners might be cause for complaint. But in the Sandringham instance, there has been no difficulty in getting people to work at the wages offered and without a union agreement.

Therefore it seems fair to believe that although the striking employees did not believe the minimum wage was enough, there are many who feel it is an adequate wage for the work that was to be done.

After all, thousands of people do work for the minimum wage. Naturally, such work is not intended to be adequate for a sole wage earner in a family but rather for those with a minimum of training and experience and usually is regarded as a stepping stone to something better.

Let me also say here that I am a little surprised at the source of some support for the striking employees and I cannot help wondering whether all churches in the Greater Victoria Council of Churches do, in fact, support the strikes, as it has been inferred. I also wonder if a majority of members in the so-called "supporting churches" have ever been polled to determine their feelings.

When we think of "feelings" then surely the churches must be concerned about the care of the patients.

Quick now — which group of employees has demonstrated that it deserves support? The ones that walked out in the middle of a shift without a word of warning to the administrator and just before a meal was to have been served to the patients OR those who stayed on the job and did the work of two or more until additional help could be hired.

In the long view, the crux of the whole thing boils down to the fact that the time has long since passed when the two senior levels of government should be providing for intermediate care in the same way they now provide for acute, rehabilitative and extended care.

Then private enterprise could bow out of the business of providing for this level of care, except for those who might want services not provided by a government run institution.

If intermediate care ever did become eligible for hospital insurance coverage, the profit motive which I still contend is undesirable in dealing with sick people, would be removed.

Until that time comes however, those who risk their capital and are prepared to assume the worries and responsibilities of providing for this need in a community, are surely entitled to operate private hospitals and nursing homes as they would any other business ... with the hope of realizing a reasonable return ... let me repeat that, a reasonable return ... on their investment.

PARENTAL PROTEST FEARED

Sex Section Snipped From New Course

A sex education section in a new course in Human Life Science has been blue pencilled by the Department of Education.

The course is designed to replace the present health program in the province's elementary schools. It will be taught on a permissive basis this September and will be compulsory in the fall of 1972.

In its final, authorized form, the course consists of two sections: the human body and drugs.

The original course prepared by the board of education, containing a section on sex education has been dropped by the department.

While the Human Life Science course lingered in departmental limbo awaiting approval, the school board rescued the sex section and introduced it into a few schools in the area on an experimental basis. The course, called Family Life, is given with the approval of parents.

Donald Brothers, minister of education, said that the decision to omit the Family Life section was a departmental decision.

"Many parents would object if sex education were a compulsory subject," he said.

He did not feel a recommendation from the board of education was sufficient reason to include the program. "The school board even wants to teach Karl Marx in the schools," Brothers said.

The minister was referring to a course in political science for grades 11 and 12 at Oak Bay High School.

The course, planned for next fall and approved by the school board, has not yet been approved by the department. It would involve a wide range of reading material and the worlds of Marx are included.

Dr. C. H. Borsman, who acts as consultant for the Family Life program, thinks the department's fears of parental wrath are unfounded in fact.

He explained that children take a note home asking permission to take the Family Life program. "Only one to two per cent of the parents have refused permission," he said.

Parents are invited to meet with Dr. Borsman and teachers giving the course. "The program is so well accepted here that parents don't bother coming to the briefing session," he said.

Dr. D. L. M. Shorting, a school trustee, thinks a program that would include civics, ethics, sex and morals should begin in kindergarten and continue to grade 12.

"Removing the sex education section of the new course indicates the ignorance of the people who are responsible," he said.

School trustee Peter Bunn thinks censorship of the Family Life section is "typical of the educational decisions in this province.

"Decisions are made on the basis of political expediency not educational need," he said.

The new Human Life Science course emphasizes "the teachable moment" rather than scheduled classes.

The teacher will answer questions when they arise or broaden discussion to include health topics. For example, a socials class on the mediaeval city can be widened in scope to include epidemics, bad sanitation and the effects of poor nutrition.

Gym classes can be used to illustrate muscular structure and the importance of physical fitness.

The study of the human body takes up about one third of the course outline. The remainder is a thorough study of drugs, their effects on the body and the dangers of drug abuse.

References for student and teacher and lists of resource material are provided for both sections.

And what if a child asks an awkward question: most of the younger teachers would answer it, according to one source that wishes to remain anonymous.

POWDER PUFF DERBY

First Winner Only Plane Aloft

By KATHLEEN NEUMEYER

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Powder Puff Derby has come a long way, baby, since Carolyn West won the first race 25 years ago — the only pilot to get off the ground.

Nearly 300 women fliers will take off July 5, in this year's jubilee event, flying from Calgary, Alta., to Baton Rouge, La., At stake will be $25,000 in prizes.

Just four members of her chapter of the Ninety-Nines, a woman's flying club founded by Amelia Earhart, were on hand when Mrs. West and her navigator, Beatrice Medes, left the Palm Springs Airport at Sunrise, March 12, 1947.

They didn't find out until they got to the air show in Tampa that they had won by default. Their only competitor had engine trouble and never left Southern California.

Mrs. West, who traded her secretarial services for flying lessons in 1931, made the 2,242-mile trip in 21 hours and 45 minutes, beating her own estimated time by 45 minutes.

"Nobody paid much attention when we left," the white-haired aviatrix recalled as she sat seated in her bluff-top home overlooking the Pacific.

"They didn't think we would make it, I guess."

Mrs. West, who has lost touch with her companion on that flight, says the race was the highlight of her flying career.

"At 2:30 on our first afternoon out, we were forced to stop in New Mexico due to a vicious sandstorm," she said.

"Then on the last day, we had to put down quickly on an old army air strip in Dunellen, Fla., a wet and lonely wait, listening to weather both on our radio and on our overhead canopy where the rain drummed."

They finally landed at Peter O. Night airport in Tampa just two minutes before the field was closed because of poor visibility.

"After the second year, they started holding the derby later in the summer, beacuse the weather can be so bad in the midwest in March," she said.

"On the trip back we were weathered in New Orleans and we got mixed up with some men running guns to South America," she continued.

"I came back from having my hair done and found six huge men — they looked like gangsters in the movies — in our suite. They propositioned Bea to fly some guns for them. We pretended to go along with them and as soon as we got home we called the FBI," she said.

"Right after that my husband, Jack, and I bought a 104-foot former army hospital boat. We flipped a coin and he became captian and I became the engineer.

"We were involved with that boat for eight years and didn't have time to take care of a plane, too," she said, explaining why, in recent years, she has confined her flying to occasional jaunts to Palm Springs in friends' planes.

The Wests have written a book about their boating experiences, and Mrs. West is a frequent contributor to boating magazines. She also has written a novel about flying, and the two of them operated a flying school during the Second World War.

This year's entrants in the Powder Puff Derby include Trudy Cooper, wife of astronaut Gordon Cooper. Represented will be 38 states, including Alaska and Hawaii.

For the first time in its history, the derby is being sponsored by Virginia Slims, the cigarette whose slogan, "You've come a long way, baby," is the theme of this year's race.

Mrs. West, who has never competed since her victory, says "I'm too old" to enter again.

"Oh, maybe it would be fun if I got back into it," she mused. "I would have to study up on the new instruments . . ."

Lonely Hyena Waits for Mate

WINNIPEG (CP)—When it comes to the sex of a hyena, it seems that only another hyena knows for sure.

That, at least, has been the experience of officials at Winnipeg's Assiniboine Park Zoo.

Three years ago, they imported a hyena from Africa to mate with a sulking male, the zoo's only hyena.

The newcomer, billed as a "guaranteed female", failed to live up to advance notices.

That left two disgruntled male hyenas snarling at each other in their alloted park area.

The engagement was broken off.

Now Clive Root, the zoo's new director, has promised better things are in store for the bachelor hyena.

He wants to get a female to mate with the male, but this time there must be no mistake.

Root said that to the human eye, the sex organs of male and female hyenas are nearly indistinguishable.

To meet that problem, he suggests a sex-determining blood test be taken before any deals.

Root, eyeing the disconsolate hyena, remarked: "We've got great plans for him."

60 Entries In Parade

Capacity crowds watched a 60-entry parade and applauded four hours of stage entertainment at Sidney July 1 celebrations.

Tulista Park was the main scene of activity with crowds lining up before 8 a.m. for a pancake breakfast served by Sidney Lions Club.

During the Kinsmen-organized day, rain curtailed the concert given by Naden military band but the remainder of the program went off without a hitch.

Parade winners were floats entered by North and South Saanich Agricultureal Association and the the Saanich Historical Artifacts Society. Other awards went to Sunset Riders, Peninsula Players, B.C. Jadett, Treasurer Island Sweathearts, and Esquimalt-Saanich Lioness.

Winner of the $5,000 pleasure boat raffled by Saanich Peninsula Agricultural and Recreational Association, was F. W. Sparks, 975 Towner Park Road, North Saanich.

Single Zone For Deer Season

Vancouver Island will have a "blanket" deer hunting season this year, the recreation and conservation department said today.

This means that the practice of dividing the Island into north and south zones, instituted in 1967, has been discontinued for the present.

With the single-zone policy, the antlerless deer season has been reduced two weeks in the northern part of the Island and extended one week in the southern portion compared to last year.

Deep snows at high elevations during the past winter have hampered the recovery of deer herds to pre-1968 levels, the department said.

Three trophy buck areas have been introduced on the southern half of the island this year as an experiment to measure demand for this kind of hunting.

In the rest of British Columbia, most big game seasons have been shortened.

The department cited diminishing habitat, increased hunter numbers and high winter mortality as reasons for the reduced seasons.

New System For Appeal

A community-based appeal system in welfare disputes has been instituted by the department of rehabilitation and social improvement.

The change takes appeal boards out of the hands of civil servants. It has been affected by new regulations under British Columbia's Social Assistance Act.

The regulations also eliminate residence requirements for welfare bringing B.C. practice in accordance with the federal Canada Assistance Plan.

A 12-month residence requirement had been in effect, until the regulations were adopted in June.

The new appeal system provides for a three-man review board composed of a person nominated by the department or a municipality who is not a civil servant, a person nominated by the appellant who is not a relative and a third party appointed by agreement of the first two.

In no case can board members be civil servants, municipal employees or relatives of the appellant.

Under the old regulations, appeal boards consisted of either provincial or municipal welfare directors, a public health doctor or nurse and a person nominated by a municipality.

A rehabilitation department official said the regulations are intended to take the review system out of the scope of the civil service.

Before the Judge

Gerald V. Barrett, 44, of Prince George, was fined $350 Wednesday by Judge William Ostler when he pleaded guilty to driving while under suspension.

Court was told that Barrett was suspended by an RCMP officer Monday evening and was stopped at 9 a.m. the following morning driving a car on Sooke Road. The suspension was to be 24 hours.

Ostler also suspended the man's licence.

Charles Robert Harrison, 20, of 2329 Dowler Place, was fined $250 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

Nina L. Norman, 34, of 960 Furber, was fined $350 for being in care and control of an auto while impaired.

Robinson also prohibited the woman from driving for three months.

Fishermen Back Longer Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia salmon net fishermen have voted in a secret ballot to continue their strike against the Fisheries Association for higher salmon prices.

The fishermen, members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Native Brotherhood of B.C., voted 79.2 per cent to reject an association offer made June 25, one day before the union went on strike.

An earlier ballot had approved the strike, by an 84.5 per cent majority, but union spokesmen said many members were travelling and unable to vote at that time.

The union said in a statement Thursday if negotiations are to resume, the association must be prepared to put a better offer on the bargaining table.

EXPAND STRIKE?

The joint union - brotherhood committee said it is considering expansion of the strike to include all fishermen, shoreworkers and tendermen and a possible shutdown of the whole B.C. salmon industry.

The union said talks have been held and further meetings will be pursued with representatives of the Pacific Trollers Association to consider combining operations towards a more effective strike, the first in eight years.

Meanwhile, the union announced its locals and branches are preparing to supply fish for home consumption of families directly affected by the dispute. Sales to the public will be advertised and conducted by union members in the near future, it said.

Re-Appointed

Gilbert Auchinlech has been re-appointed to the board of governors at the University of Victoria.

The appointment was approved by the provincial cabinet and is effective until June 30, 1974.

RED SHIELD TOPS GOAL OF $85,000

The Salvation Army's Red Shield Appeal has exceeded its $85,000 objective, making this year's appeal the most successful ever held in Greater Victoria.

General manager Lyle Wicks said the volunteer workers and citizens of Victoria have raised $89,000.

The 1972 campaign chairman will be John Wade, this year's vice-president and special names division chairman. Wade is also a member of the Army's Citizen's Advisory Board.

HELD BY SWISS is American drug advocate Dr. Timothy Leary, who was arrested Wednesday. Leary is expected to apply for political asyium to avoid deportation to the U.S. where he must finish a jail term for possession of marijuana.

Government Appealing Juvenile Court Decision

The provincial government has taken the issue of 17-year-olds in adult court to the Supreme Court of Canada, appealing a B.C. Appeal court decision that 17-year-olds are juveniles.

Attorney-General Peterson launched the appeal against the June 21 provincial appeal court decision that termed 17-year-olds juveniles.

The status of 17-year-olds before the courts in B.C. has changed three times since the beginning of the year:

BACKLOG

A Vancouver provincial court judge in January ruled that a federal proclamation claiming 17-year-olds as adults in court was illegal because it infringed on earlier provincial jurisdiction.

The federal government last October proclaimed, at the request of B.C., that 17-year-olds were adults in court rather than juveniles.

The B.C. Supreme Court in April overturned the January provincial court decision and the backlog of 17-year-olds before the courts began to move through courts again as adults.

But their status again changed with the June 21 decision of the B.C. Appeal court

A spokesman for Peterson's office said Wednesday the case before the Supreme Court of Canada will be handled by an Ottawa lawyer representing the B.C. government.

He said 17-year-olds will continue to be charged as juveniles pending the Supreme Court decision.

LOCAL TEACHER GUYANA-BOUND

John Kenwood, chairman of the science department at Lansdowne Junior Secondary, will be one of 59 teachers from across Canada leaving Ottawa Wednesday to work in developing countries.

The teachers have volunteered to spend the summer without salary helping instructors in overseas countries to upgrade their teaching skills and strengthen their professional teacher organizations.

Of 54 volunteers assigned to 11 countries in Asia, the West Indies and Africa last year, Kenwood spent the summer in South Africa. For his second trip, he has been assigned to Guyana.

The Grade 10 teacher leaves Victoria Sunday for a two-day orientation course at Ottawa University, geared to preparing the volunteers for their assignments in 11 West Indian and African countries.

The program is part of the Canadain Teachers' Federation Project Overseas, as sponsored by the group, its provincial and territorial teacher organizations and the Canadian International Development Agency.

Speeches, Parties, Parades—The Usual Centennial Fare

For most Canadians Dominion Day passed Thursday as just another summer holiday marked by speeches, parties and parades.

And for those who didn't want to celebrate the country's 104th anniversary at home, the resorts and summer cottages beckoned, amid the usual warnings about possible road deaths and drownings.

In Toronto, there were five-cent hot dogs to be had at a provincial government picnic held at midtown Queen's Park, seat of the legislature, while in Ottawa music and sport shared the spotlight with a military parade marking the 100th year of Canada's regular armed forces.

In Montreal several thousand placard-carrying youths demonstrated against Confederation and for Quebec independence with their own July 1 parade.

While Dominion Day celebrations were taking part in other areas of the city, the youths carried banners that read "Down with Confederation," "Quebec—our only country," "English Quebecois for a free and independent Quebec" and "Confederation—104 years of injustice."

The crowd, made up of various separatist and socialist groups and thousand of spectators, carried red, white and green flags of the Quebec "patriots" of 1837. Many youths wore shirts of the same color.

Hundreds of police stood by during the three-hour affair but there was no violence, as the crowd was in a festive mood despite the hot, muggy weather.

Later when organizers asked for all flags and banners to be removed so the crowd would not be charged with holding an illegal demonstration after the parade permit expired, a young woman clad only in a patriot flag and panties delighted the crowd by complying with the request.

In Ottawa about 20,000 people attended a 700-man display of the music, marching, artillery drills and flypasts staged by the Canadian Forces and marking their anniversary as well as the country's.

The other major event came in the evening when the bells of Peace Tower began an open-air variety show featuring choirs and bands from across the country.

Governor-General Roland Michener, who opened the military display in the morning, welcomed Ottawa school children to a garden party in the afternoon. Highland dancing, judo, karate, fencing and a circus were the fare for the youngsters.

In the Atlantic provinces, Dominion Day celebrations in Newcastle, N.B., were highlighted by a visit to the town by Adolph Schmidt, United States ambassador to Canada.

In Campbellton, N.B., Premier Richard Hatfield opened the town's fifth annual salmon festival.

The counterpart to Dominion Day celebrations in Newfoundland will be observed Monday.

July 1 is a time of mourning in the province for the men of the Newfoundland Regiment who died at Beaumont Hamel in northern France during the First World War.

Turkey Imposes Opium Ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government of Turkey, supplier of half the world supply of raw opium and 60 per cent of the illicit heroin in the United States, has announced a total ban on growth of poppies and production of opium by the fall of 1972.

The announcement, in Ankara, climaxing a decade of negotiations with the United States, was hailed by President Nixon as a "statesmanlike and courageous" act and a "significant breakthrough" in efforts to control heroin addiction world-wide.

Secretary of State William Rogers said the United States would compensate an estimated 75,000 peasant families and the state for their losses in abandoning Turkey's centuries-old cultivation of opium poppies, from which heroin is derived.

Rogers said no decision had been made on the amount of U.S. assistance in the changeover to other crops, but he estimated that Turkey's opium trade is valued at $3 million to $5 millian a year.

The decision of the Turkish council of ministers, announced in the official gazette, said the ban would go into effect this fall in three of the seven provinces still growing poppies and would be extended to the other four next year. Opium cultivation was the economic mainstay of 42 provinces as recently as 1960.

"All opium cultivation and production throughout Turkey will be banned by the end of the fall, 1972, definitely and totally," the government said.

Nixon appeared with Rogers and Turkish ambassador Melih Esenbel in the White House press room, after a meeting in his office, and said Turkey's decision would be "a significant contribution to the well-being of the world."

Trade Union For Teachers

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec Teachers' Corporation decided Thursday to end its corporation status and become a trade union.

The majority of 750 delegates to the corporation's 21st annual meeting here decided after a two-day debate that teachers are workers like anyone else and should not require special status under the labor code.

The name and character of the corporation's successor will be decided at a founding convention to be held at a later date.

The congress deemed the change necessary to carry out decisions reached in June, 1970, concerning the organization's union activities and the distribution of power among its decision-making bodies.

Fund Teams In Pakistan

Save the Children Fund teams are working with the Pakistan cholera refugees in the Khyani area 20 miles north of Calcutta, local SCF representative Mrs. W. W. McGill said today.

A telex from the head office in London said the teams were working with six Land Rovers, 10 tons of shelter material, two and a half tons of medical supplies and seven tons of food. This week 23 additional tons of food and supplies will be flown out, the telex said.

Jain Replies To Charges

Dr. Tikam Jain has replied to charges levelled against him at advisory board hearings looking into the circumstances surrounding the non-renewal of his contract.

The former University of Victoria professor, whose contract expired Wednesday, has sent a letter to David Williams, solicitor for the three-man advisory board.

Chemistry department chairman Dr. Stephen Ryce told the board Monday "breach of professional ethics" is the main reason for Jain not gaining tenure and that he had accused Jain of lying about aspects of research work done by a graduate student under Jain's supervision. Apparently the research was a duplication of work done earlier by an Oakland, Calif. scientist.

STUDENT REMOVED

Jain says in his letter he pointed out this fact to the student and prepared further research work for him. He says he asked the student for a porgress report on the new research and, finding it unsatisfactory, recommended that the student be withdrawn from graduate studies because of "poor research potential."

The student was not withdrawn but was removed from Jain's supervision. The student's thesis was subsequently completed and a master's degree granted.

'BEARS MY NAME'

Jain says in his letter to Williams: "If the members of your Advisory Board compare the contents of the progress report with the contents of the thesis, it will be readily apparent that in fact the thesis deals almost exclusively with the same kind of work as set forth in the progress report. Of course, the thesis goes beyond the progress report and contains work carried out by me in my laboratory."

Jain says that from the time the student was removed from his supervision, he had nothing to do with the approval of the thesis, "yet the thesis bears my name as supervisor, without my consent and authority, and was approved by men who had no experience in the field of natural products chemistry."

Jain, in his letter, also takes issue with assistant dean of arts and science Dr. William Gordon, who told the board Monday he consulted an outside scientist on Jain's claim that he had isolated a new natural product compound.

Gorden said he delivered documents on Jain's claim to a "distinguished chemist" from another B.C. university who concluded that Jain had not discovered a new compound. Gordon then wrote a report on the matter which apparently resulted in the decision by university president Bruce Partridge to not grant Jain tenure.

INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL

Jain still claims his compound is a new one.

"A description of my work and its conclusions is contained in a paper about to be published in an international journal of plant chemistry," Jain wrote.

"A prerequisite of such publication is 'refereeing', that is, an evaluting of the scientific work which the paper describes by acknowledged experts in the field of natural products chemistry."

Jain says he "would be happy at any time to discuss the contents of my paper and the nature of my work with the 'distinguished chemist' whom Dr. Gordon says he consulted, but, for reasons not apparent to me, whose name and comments to this day have been withheld from me."

Partridge Statement Draws Protest

The three University of Victoria professors whose contracts have not been renewed have taken issue with statements attributed to president Bruce Partridge concerning the termination of their contracts.

J. J. Gow, lawyer for the three — Dr. William Goede, Dr. Tikam Jain and Toby Graff — sent a letter Wednesday to the university board of governors objecting to statements Partridge apparently made Tuesday to the effect that had the three participated in advisory board hearings into their cases, their contracts might have been extended.

Contracts of the three expired Wednesday. Newspaper accounts of Tuesday's hearings included Partridge's statement: "If they were waiting around to testify at the hearings, we would then have some obligation to them."

Partridge was also quoted as saying: "But since they were boycotting the hearings and were free to leave town or take employment elsewhere the university felt no such obligation."

Gow says in his letter to the board: "President Partridge's innuendo is that my clients are acting improperly in declining to participate in the hearings of the Advisory Board and are not co-operating. As with most innuendoes, this innuendo is completely false.

Gow said his clients "Are under no moral, far less a legal duty to submit their respective disputes with the university to an advisory board created by the university, and which board has not and cannot have any adjudicatory powers.

"Let it also be said that any delay in the final and proper disposition of the disputes between my clients and the university is not of their making. Nor does lack of co-operation lie with them. At all times they have been willing to proceed immediately with a hearing before the proper academic tribunal, namely, the Visitor."

The three professors were turned down Monday in a bid to the Supreme Court of B.C. to enforce the visitor, Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson, to hear their appeals.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

MR. EVANS

I wish to gratefully acknowledge your assistance to my wife Mrs. Gibb who was in difficulty today, June 29, at Yates and Douglas. Your kind assistance will always be remembered.

9 IN MEMORIAM

JONES—John. In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away July 2, 1970.

We watched you suffer and heard your signs,
But all we could do was just stand by,
For when the time came we suffered too.
You never deserved what you went through.
God took your hands and we had to part,
He eased your pains but broke our hearts,
Although we smile and seem carefree,
Nobody misses you more than we.

—Sadly missed by his wife Elizabeth, son Trefor and daughter-in-law Marjorie.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

JULIA. 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Haanah has the last-minute jitters. She's only hours away from her Las Vegas wedding and Dr. Chegley's wisecracks aren't helping at all to reassure her. Susan Strasberg, Pernell Roberts (remember Bonanza's Adam?) and Slim Pickens are in the guest cast.

THE HIGH CHAPARRAL. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun). "To Stand for Something More." This show goes back two years to when Mark Slade was a member of the crew. John Cannon leaves him in charge of the ranch, and Blue blows the chance. Prize stallions are stolen, and after a reprimand from his father, Blue sets out alone to battle the bandits.

THE BRADY BUNCH. 7:30 p.m., Channel 4. (Rerun). "The Tattletale." Cindy (Susan Olsen) lets her mouth get her in trouble tonight when she becomes a tattletale on the other children and causes trouble between Sam and Alice. Father (Robert Reed) threatens to punch her unless she stops.

HERE COME THE STARS. 8 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Back for its second year on CBC's summer schedule, this showcase of Hollywood heroes starts with Jimmy Stewart as the guest of honor. Also appearing are Ed Begley, Agnes Moorehead and Singers Frankie Avalon, Susan Barrett and Jan Daley. Comedians Rich Little, Morey Amsterdam, Gene Baylos, Herb Eden and Georgie Kaye round out the bill and George Jessel is the master of ceremonies.

NANNY AND THE PROFESSOR. 8 p.m., Channel 4. (Rerun). There's a new professor in Nanny's life, a handsome, young, mod one, who is indifferent to the college coeds but when Nanny enrolls for night coures, Prof. Roger Samuelson, better known as "Swinging Sam," makes the big play for her. Bert Convy guests as Swinging Sam.

THE NAME OF THE GAME. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun). One of the better episodes starring Peter Falk, Geraldine Page, David Wayne, Tom Ewell and Shepard Strudwich in "A Sister From Napoli." Falk plays a reporter investigating charges that a district attorney is unfit for the judgeship to which he is about to be appointed.

THE PARTRIDGE FAMILY. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. "Old Scrapemouth." If Cindy one of the Brady family had trouble with her mouth tonight, Laurie Partridge can sympathize. But Laurie's problem is the curse of many teenagers, teeth braces. She refused to appear with the group on TV, relents, and soon hears music coming from the braces. Susan Dey is featured tonight.

THE FRIDAY NIGHT MOVIE. 9 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. "An American Dream." (1966) with Stuart Whitman, Janet Leigh, Barry Sullivan, Eleanor Parker and Lloyd Nolan. Whitman is an arrogant, muckraking TV commentator in trouble with his wife, the police and the underworld. It's pretty dreary stuff. Worth watching: ex-Playboy playmate Susan Denberg in a towel.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30 Channel 12: War Arrow (1954 Western) Maureen O'Hara, Jeff Chandler. An action-filled western with a predictable plot.

7:30 Channel 13: Buried Alive (1940 Drama) Beverly Roberts, Robert Wilcox. A prison trusty and a nurse love each other, but then he's framed on a murder rap.

8:00 Channel 8: El Greco (Italian; 1964 Drama) Mel Ferrer, Rosanna Schiaffino. This film gained critical notice for its excellent photography of the Spanish countryside.

9:00 Channels 7 and 12: An American Dream (1966 Drama) Stuart Whitman, Janet Leigh, Norman Mailer's off-beat novel served as the basis for this film adaptation.

11:00 Channel 13: Delinquent Parents (1938 Drama) Doris Weston, Maurice Murphy. A respected civic leader sees her daughter following the same wrong road that she did when she was young.

11:05 Channel 12: It Started With a Kiss (1959 Comedy) Glenn Ford, Debbie Reynolds. Amusing comedy about an Air Force sergeant, his new bride and a fabulous car, highlighted by splendid scenic backgrounds shot in Spain.

11:30 Channel 7: Revenge of the Creature (1955 Science Fiction) John Agar, Lori Nelson. A young scientist sets out to capture a monster and use him for scientific studies.

11:45 Channel 6: El Greco (See 8 P.M. Ch. 8 for details).

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

I was interested to see a recent article in which Irene Glickstein, a member of the administrative staff of Community Service Society, in New York, listed a number of danger signals, warning that a marriage will not work well, or will bring with it serious problems:

(1) One partner has hopes that the other will change after their marriage; such a person is in for a disappointment.

(2) One or both partners feel rejected or put down, when the other disagrees or doesn't always agree.

(3) One or both partners are not capable of expressing strongly feelings of either anger or love; such a person tends to withdraw when conflicts arise, and will refuse to discuss and attempt to solve them.

(4) One or both partners are unusually possessive and incapable of admitting that the other has a right to an identity or an individuality of his own.

(5) The partners operate at very different tempos; one makes his decisions quickly, the other very slowly.

(6) The partners have different money-spending patterns; one spends lavishly, while the other is thrifty and careful.

(7) A stormy engagement period, or an on-again-off-again engagement, indicates some kind of unresolved feelings about getting married, and constitutes a danger to the marriage.

In my 65 years as a physician, I have seen many people whose mental distress and physical discomforts and symptoms were due to great unhappiness over a marriage that was in trouble; it might not be one of these that end in a divorce court, but I could see that it was so shaky that the couple was not so much married as "undivorced."

As I have often mentioned here, the commonest reason that I could see for the marital troubles people had was that they were too emotionally immature and childish to live comfortably together as grown-ups should.

Sometimes, a man's success in business can cause much trouble; many a woman, especially in middle life, complains that her husband is so deeply engrossed in business that he loses interest in the little details of life with her; his work so absorbs his interests, his thinking, and his planning that he has little thought for much else.

Another danger is that while the man is constantly growing in his knowledge, and constantly coming into interesting contacts with unusual people, his wife, left at home with the children, stagnates mentally; she fails to ketp up, and sometimes she resents her husband's growth; she dislikes his friends and is jealous of them.

As Miss Glickstein said, and as I have found, many marriage bonds become gradually loosened when two people run into a number of topics which they cannot even mention without starting a row. The angry partner shows a lack of respect for the right of the other to hold and express differing views.

In a happy marriage where the two partners can discuss anything without fear of starting an argument or bringing down on the head of one of them bitter criticism, there is never any need for lying or keeping things dark. And this is very good for making a happy and safe marriage. No matter how big or small the problem that has to be discussed, if the truth is told, mutual trust will remain strong. Once a lie has been told, and found out, mutual trust will have been broken.

Many a time in the office, I have wondered why a woman of education and refinement was suffering so severely from nerves. For an hour or so I kept probing, until she broke down and told me that her husband was constantly embarrassing her because of his lack of culture, his poor use of English, and his general uncouthness.

When I would say to such a woman, "Didn't you know that when you married him?" she invariably would answer, "Yes, but I thought I could change him, or could overlook the things I did not like."

My feeling is that when people marry, they had better accept each other for what they are. Only when they do this will they find happiness.

HOME GARDEN

Name Game for Summer

By HILDA BEASTALL

A summer game for gardeners is trying to find the name of a plant not seen before. Once you begin the game you find its fascination increases. You play it all the year round, with houseplants seen in windows from the outside as well as with garden plants.

Hilda

I started this more than 25 years ago, identifying skimmia and azara after much research.

Keen observation is of first importance. Decide whether the unknown plant is a tree (having a single trunk or stem bearing branches), a shrub (having many stems rising from just about ground level), or is a soft (green) stemmed plant which dies to soil level each fall and is renewed each spring from the same root stock (a herbaceous perennial).

The next point is whether the leaves of the tree or shrub remain green all winter to classify as an evergreen, or whether they change in color during fall and subsequently drop. This makes the plant deciduous.

Note the most obvious points about the unknown plant: bark, shape of leaf, general outline of the plant as a whole, the environment, particularly if in woodland or wild land.

Finally note whether flowers are present, if so, their color, shape, size and whether borne singly or in clusters. You may find fruits from the previous season as a clue. These will be on the plant or on the ground beneath.

A botonist has a fool-proof system for classifying an unknown plant once this amount of data is available, but the rest of us must get along with the garden encyclopedia, books of plant portraits, and best of all perhaps, rows of plants growing in nurseries with name labels firmly embedded at the end of each row.

You may also find your mystery plant, with a name tag, at a garden shop but be sure it is a botanical name and not a common name. If the latter, you will still have to go back to the encyclopedia to find the botanical name to tack on to it.

Just now I have a mystery of my own. On a daily trip this plant bothers me. Whizzing by at all of 30 miles an hour I cannot see enough to identify it. Some day I'll find its ntme.

If you can sketch, by all means make a visual record of your find together with the written description. Then, dated, you will know how long it takes before final and authentic identification is made.

The game increases the powers of observation and the pleasure of gardening.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

During the past two decades, many specialized conventional bids have sprouted up, each designed to take care of some specific situation which previous methods proved unable to cope with satisfactorialy. By and large, these new bids are effective, but they all have one major drawback; one member of the partnerhip frequently forgets that he is using the new brain child.

Today's deal illustrates this forgetfulness. Luckily for the bidders, it resulted in an undeserved bonanza.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

North and South, respectively, were two of the world's top players: Terence Reese and Boris Schapiro, of London, England. On their way to a tournament in 1957, they decided to use the Texas Convention for the first time.

This convention comes into being after an opening notrump call. The responder, holding a hand with which he feels the contract should be four hearts, bid four diamonds. This commands the opener to bid four hearts. And if responder has a hand that he thinks should play at four spades, he responds four hearts, commanding opener to bid four spades. These bids are known as "transfer" bids.

The virtue of this convention is that it enables the opening notrump bidder to play the hand, thereby (1) securing the advantage of the opening lead, and the further advantage of (2) the strong hand not being exposed as the dummy.

Well, Schapiro forgot, but Reese didn't So Reese bid four spades over South's four heart call, as per convention. Belatedly, it dawned on Schapiro that he should have bid four diamonds to get Reese to play the contract at four hearts. He now tried to recover by gambling six hearts, hoping that Reese would realize that Schapiro had forgotten. Reese got the message.

After West's spade ace had won the opening lead, he led another spade, probably figuring that Schapiro was void of diamonds. South's queen won the trick. Trumps were then drawn, after which dummy was entered via the club ace. On the spade king, South discarded his losing diamond. He then ruffed a diamond.

Schapiro next cashed all his trumps, leaving himself with the Q-6 of clubs, while dummy had the diamond king and the K-7 of clubs. On the last trump lead West had been unable to hold on to both the diamond ace and the J-8-5 of clubs. He had chosen to discard a club, so Schapiro won the last three tricks in clubs.

When Fred is twict as old as Ted will be when Steve is half again as old as Ted was when Steve was a third as old as Fred when Ted was as old as Steve is now. Ted will be two thirds as old as Fred is now.

When Ted is twice his present age, Fred will be four times as old as Steve is now.

We have taken ages in complete years, and one of the three is in his teens. How old is Fred?

Thanks for idea to A. G. Bradbury, North Bay, Ontario.

Rare Chicks Hatched

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Cornell University says one of the world's rare and threatened birds, a white naped crane, has laid nine fertile eggs from which three chicks have been hatched at the university's laboratory of ornithology. The successful hatchings were the first reported in more than 20 years in the western world, Cornell said. The white naped crane is found in the wild only in northeast China, and scientists say the species now numbers fewer than 2,000.

Sparkling Orchestra Opens Victoria Fair

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The premiere performance of the newly-formed Festival Chamber Orchestra, Wednesday, in the MacLaurin Auditorium, ushered in Victoria Fair '71's summer season of concerts and plays.

As an opening event it had a great deal going for it.

The concept of the orchestra is an ideal one for a university-based arts festival, providing senior music students not only with a sense of achievement but also with invaluable experience in a situation where the majority of the players are seasoned professionals.

The performance of the well-selected program enhanced the conducting laurels of dynamic George Corwin and offered the particular delight of Boyde Hood's superbly virtuoso solo trumpet.

Haydn's Concerto for Trumpet and Orchestra is a charming, as well as a thrilling work, technically. It demands of the soloist a great amount of flexibility, clarity and precision in phrasing. The slow movement is pure lyricism and should be — and was on this occasion — played with great warmth and eloquence of tone and a smooth, flowing line.

ON UVIC STAFF

Thrills, leaping intervals, cascading scales, strict dynamic control, all attested to the superior qualities of this fine artist who is on the Uvic music faculty and next season will be playing solo trumpet with the Victoria Symphony.

The Bach Ouverture Suite No. 1 provided the orchestra with excellent opportunities to display its virtues as well as the areas in which only time and working together as an ensemble can effect improvement.

If a chamber orchestra is to be a thing of real beauty, it must be closely integrated and perfectly balanced, with the sort of definition that gives the texture of its performance kind of translucence.

Much of this is in the making with the Festival Chamber Orchestra and it is certainly most pleasant to listen to, despite, now and then — most noticeable in the Bach — some coarseness in the stringtone.

The slight rigidity one discerned in the Bach — due in all likelihood to tensions — softened in the Haydn in which the role of accompaniment was gracefully and fluently handled, and still further in the Schubert B-flat Symphony.

Here Corwin communicated his notable gifts of lyricism and subtle command of color and the orchestra responded with a performance that was charming, lively and with more than a trace of "gemutlicht," that special Germanic quality of happiness of the spirit for which there is no English word.

Both as an occasion in itself and as a promise of things to come it was an auspicious affair, greeted by a good-sized and clearly appreciative audience.

The program will be repeated tonight at 8 in the MacLaurin and well deserves not be missed.

HELLYER SOCRED HEAD? —HE'S NOT INTERESTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Although he has been asked to consider running for the national leadership of the Social Credit Party, Paul Hellyer Thursday said he was not really interested.

"I had talks with them Monday," Hellyer said in an interview, referring to Social Credit officials, "And they mentioned my running for the party leadership.

"But I'm not really interested in running for the leadership of the Social Credit — or of the Conservatives either for that matter. Of course I was very flattered to be asked.

"I also have been asked to consider running for the Progressive Conservative leadership should it come open at some time in the future.

"I was flattered then as well, but I'm not really interested in the leadership of any political party as such."

Of his discussion with the Social Credit officials, including party president Robert Robichaud, Hellyer said:

"We only had a short time for our discussions Monday and that's why we are planning further talks.

"I think we (Action Canada) and the (Social Credit) have a great many concerns that are similar about the direction in which Canada is moving.

"So I said to them, let's see if we can agree on such things as wage and price guidelines.

BOTH CONCERNED

"We're both concerned about the way the economy is going, so let's see if we can come up with something between us for the good of Canada."

He explained again that Action Canada, formation of which he announced following his resignation from the Liberal party because of dissatisfaction with government economic policies, was intended as an umbrella organization for Canadians who wanted the same things and who want to act to change the direction of government policy. He said it was not a political party and was not intended to become a political party.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Junk Mail Row Erupts

Postmen Threaten Walkout

OTTAWA (CP) — Leaders of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada were meeting with post office officials this afternoon to try to prevent a dispute about delivery of "junk" or third-class mail from erupting into a national walkout.

Jim Mayes, first vice-president of the union, said in an interview today that he will ask postal officials to delay imposing new delivery regulations until he can meet Deputy Postmaster-General J. A. H. Mackay next week.

He said that if the post office goes ahead with its plans to reorganize the delivery system for "dear householder" mail, "we can't be responsible for the reaction of the membership."

Earlier, a union spokesman said a bulletin will go out to all of the 12,000 union members today advising them to "lock up and leave" if they are forced to conform to the post office proposals.

William Findlay, second vice-president of the letter carriers, said in an interview the post office had breached an agreement signed April 3 regarding junk mail handling.

A July 1 telegram from P. C. Valois, the head of the post office's staff relations, said the post office intends to continue with union-opposed changes in handling junk mail.

"He's threatened us," said Findlay.

"He's a new fellow down there that feels the old brigade has been too soft on us. Well, we're sending out a bulletin today to all our members and when junk mail comes in our people will refuse to touch it.

"We'll lock up and leave."

WANT EXTRA MINUTE

Findlay said all the letter carriers want is "an extra minute a day" to sort such mail — circulars, advertising brochures and the like.

Unless the letter carriers receive this extra minute, Findlay said, "there is no way we touch these things."

He said Roger Decarie, co-chairman of the Council of Postal Unions and head of the letter corriers, had left instructions to have members walk off the job if the post office did not comply with the union-requested changes. Decarie is on a holiday in the Maritimes.

"He was so damn mad when he left he told us to

HUMAN CANCER VIRUS ISOLATED

HOUSTON, Tex. (Reuter) — American scientists announced Friday they have isolated and extracted a human cancer virus for the first time.

The development, climaxing mounting speculation that viruses play a leading role in the cause of some human cancers, was seen as opening a new front in the world-wide battle against the disease.

Cosmonaut Deaths Result of Air Leak

LONDON (AP) — The Moscow correspondent of the London Evening News says the three Soviet cosmonauts died because "they failed to seal the hatch of their spacecraft properly."

The usually well-informed correspondent, Victor Louis, a Russian, says this explanation of the death of the three Soviet spacemen was put forth by Moscow scientists gathered for the state funeral.

"Human error and mechanical failure between them caused creeping depressurization in the spacemen's nine-foot cabin and deprived the astronauts of life-supporting oxygen on the final phase of their journey," Louis writes.

"As I understand it," he adds, "the spacecraft's hatchway opened slightly in the turbulence of re-entry to the earth's atmosphere—enough to suck the cosmonauts' air supply into space."

The word, says Louis, is that a design fault caused the tragedy.

The cosmonauts — Georgy Dobrovosky, Vladislav Volkov and Victor Patsayev — were laid to rest today in the Kremlin Wall, the traditional burial place for Russia's fallen heroes.

The cosmonauts were eulogized at funeral ceremonies in Red Square for their flight aboard the world's first space laboratory.

Mstislav V. Keldysh, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, told the thousands of Russians assembled in Red Square for the cosmonauts' funeral and they had "opened up vast possibilities for all mankind."

"Their flight aboard the world's first long-term manned space station, Salute, marks the beginning of a new stage in the conquest of cosmic space," said Keldysh, speaking from Lenin's Tomb beside the Kremlin Wall.

A fellow cosmonaut pledged the Soviet Union will continue to conquer space. He is Vladimir A. Shatalov, who commanded Soyuz 10, which linked up briefly with Salute in April, but didn't board the station.

$7 Million Gift Icing On B.C. Birthday Cake

By IAN HAMILTON

It was the kind of birthday party you had to be at to appreciate.

Prime Minister Trudeau, Premier W. A. C. Bennett, 14 federal cabinet ministers, and assorted provincial dignitaries led a crowd of over 3,000 spectators Thursday morning in July 1 Centennial celebrations.

The second political "who's who" in Victoria in two weeks, the affair rivalled the constitutional conference in mid-June for finger-snapping and long questioning stares as tourists and natives attempted to identify the various big-name guests.

Trueadu himself provided the icing for the provincial cake, announcing in a nationally-televised speech "gifts from the people of Canada." To wit, the dispersal of the $7 million remaining from Ottawa's $10 million Centennial grant to B.C.

A $4.5 million fund will be set up to develop natural conservation areas, called the Second Century fund of B.C., and the remaining $2.5 million will build a museum to house Indian artifacts at the University of B.C.

In keeping with the prime minister's style, there was as much informality involved in the 1½ hours of political pomp as ceremony would allow. However, the holiday air was not all devoid of loud protesting noises.

The legislative lawns contained a minority of placard-toting demonstrators who tried unsuccessfully to hold the attention of the dignitaries.

TWO FIGHTS

Two fights broke out in the crowd, one between a grey-haired stocky man and an Amchitka 2 Sympathizer and the, other a minor scuffle between a pair of women's lib pro-abortionists and a woman who resented either their sign or their continual yelling.

Police broke up both skirmishes easily and the various speakers appeared not to be unduly perturbed with the numerous shouts of derison on such subjects as inflation, Canadian complicity in Vietnam, seal hunting, abortion and economic independence.

Highlight of festivities was the reading of a proclamation by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson calling on "Canadians everywhere to acknowledge and join in the celebration of British Columbia on the 100th anniversary."

The first federal cabinet meeting held in B.C. preceded the reading, as Ottawa leaders signed it inside the legislative builging.

Later, with the sun break-

Hydro Workers Back at Job After 11th-Hour Meeting

Electrical workers were back on the job at B.C. Hydro today following an 11-day strike.

The 2,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 258, returned voluntarily following a summit meeting with Labor Minister James Chabot late Thursday night.

"Both sides have resolved their differences," Chabot said after a 3½-hour session with representatives of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

ARBITRATION

"Hydro has agreed to a third party arbitrator and the union has agreed to arbitration."

The 11th-hour turn of events came just before the midnight deadline the union faced as a result of the government invoking the act and compulsory arbitration Wednesday.

Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Court of Appeal will arbitrate the dispute, but outside the provisions of the act which has attracted almost universal opposition from provincial unions.

Mr. Chabot said Mr. Justice Nemetz will not meet with either side until after he returns from a world congress of judges conference in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 2.

"And until such time as the dispute is resolved, the conditions of the expired contract continue," said the labor minister.

HOW LONG

"I cannot even assume how long it will take him to come down with a decision after he meets with the two sides."

The dispute began with a series of spot strikes and gradually escalated. The union is seeking an 18.5-per-cent wage increase over two years on a base rate of $5.39 an hour. Hydro, a Crown corporation, has offered 14 per cent.

The activities which led to the voluntary return-to-work agreement started Wednesday with the provincial government ordering both sides back to work under the act "to protect the public interest and welfare." The government's order-in-council also named Mr. Justice Nemetz as sole arbitrator.

. . . all up to him

BINDING

He was to make a recommendation for a contract and if both sides didn't accept it, or agree to change it, the contract would have been made binding by the B.C. Mediation Commission.

Mr. Justice Nemetz wired Mr. Chabot that he was ready to accept the post as arbitrator and listed three problem areas.

He said he was not prepared to make a contract recommendation which could be refused, he would not participate as arbitrator unless both sides agreed to have him and he could not take the job until he returned from the judges' conference in Europe.

"I'm leaving town in the morning and I certainly don't want to sound as if I rebuffed anyone," said Mr. Justice Nemetz Thursday night.

Hijacked Jet Mexico-Bound

DALLAS (UPI) — A Braniff International 707 jet with 110 persons aboard was hijacked today by a heavily armed man and woman and diverted from its Texas destination to Monterrey, Mexico.

The plane was Braniff's flight 14, originating in Acapulco, with stops in Mexico City, San Antonio, Dallas, Washington and New York. It was hijacked after it left Mexico City.

Cong Propose PoW Release With Pullout

Times News Services

PARIS — A proposal advanced Thursday by the Viet Cong delegation to the deadlocked Vietnam peace talks here offered repatriation of all prisoners of war held by Hanoi, in return for complete withdrawal of United States and allied forces from Vietnam by the end of 1971.

The Pentagon Papers
See pages 13, 26

Reaction in Washington to the proposal was mixed, ranging from skepticism in some quarters about the motives behind the offer, to guarded optimism that genuine progress toward peace is starting.

The official White House and state department stance is the seven-point plan contains "positive as well as clearly unacceptable elements" and will be given serious study.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird indicated that there would be little difficulty in pulling all U.S. troops out of Vietnam by the end of the year but the cost to the American taxpayer would run to billions of dollars.

CLOSE SCRUTINY

As the Nixon arministration gave close scrutiny to the proposals Laird raised ths problem of returning U.S. weapons and equipment from Vietnam.

At a planeside news conference at Andrews AFB before leaving on a Far East trip — with no Vietnam stop included — Laird was asked whether there would be any obstacles from the Pentagon's point of view toward physically meeting the Communist call for a total U.S. pullout this year.

He replied that this was a "very hypothetical question" because it did not deal with the matter of equipment. "Personnel can be handled, of course, in a short time," he said.

TWO CANADIANS RESCUED, BAD WEATHER PREVAILS

Mutiny, Crash Spice Air Race

A plane with two men aboard went down in the Atlantic and a co-pilot mutinied, kicked out his pilot and flew on alone in the opening stages of the London-Victoria Air Race today.

The downed plane hit the icy water about 10 miles off the southwestern coast of Greenland. Rescue officials said the men were picked up by one of two Danish planes taking part in a rescue-operation cover for the race.

The plane, designed as a single-engine Viking 300, carried W. F. Sneider of Brampton, Ont., and P. R. Gilmore of Toronto.

Rescue operations were conducted from "somewhere in Greenland," the officials said.

Canada Celebrates Birthday, page 27

The mutiny occurred when two Americans had a fight in mid-air Thursday night. When the smoke had cleared, the co-pilot was flying on alone and the pilot and owner of the aircraft was in hospital in Scotland recovering from cuts and bruises.

The injured man, Dr. Lawrence Dennis, a 56-year-old osteopath from Milwaukee, Ore., told police he and pilot Roger Flanagan of Canby, Ore., tangled in midair when Dennis insisted they turn back for repairs.

The plane, a four-seat Mooney Ranger, landed at Prestwick and "there was an incident on the tarmac," police said. "Dr Dennis was left lying on the ground bleeding from a face injury.

"His co-pilot went to the aircraft, which immediately took off again."

Dr. Dennis was not seriously injured.

The plane passed through Reykjavik, Iceland, early today and headed for Greenland. Officials of the race in London said the plane might be disqualified if flown solo but that was up to headquarters in Canada.

Police said Dennis is co-owner of the aircraft with another doctor.

Dennis told reporters he paid $5,000 to finance his attempt to win the $170,000 race, including a fee to his co-pilot. "I had to have someone along with instrument-flying experience," he said.

Hannagan, 22, is a flying instructor at the airport where Dennis usually keeps his plane.

"After taking off from Prestwick, we realized a door was not shut properly," Dennis said.

"Hannagan tried to shut it without success. I wanted to turn back but he disagreed, saying we would lose valuable time.

"There was quite a skir-

VICTORIA PILOT FIRST ACROSS

Victoria businssman Claude Butler, leading the field into Quebec City on the first lap of the London-Victoria Air Race, said today he "doesn't have a chance at the prize money."

Butler, 59, is flying a twin-turboprop Aerostar with four of its six seats removed to allow more space for fuel tanks. He was first off the tarmac at Abingdon airfield near London Thursday, and retained his lead into Quebec City, end of the first major leg of the $170,000 race.

His pessimism about prize-money chances is based on the fact that his speedy Aerostar is laboring under a stiff handicap compared with smaller, slower aircraft in the race.

Co-pilot is Harold Aasen of Delta, B.C., manager of a Butler store in Whalley.

An exhausted Butler called his wife at their home at 1781 Verling at 3:30 a.m. Victoria time today to report his safe arrival. He was whisked to hotel by race officials to rest up for take-off July 4, when crews of slower planes will have arrived and rested for the next lap.

"I was terribly worried while he was over the Atlantic," Mrs. Butler said. "I'm no tworried any longer. While they're over Canada there's nothing to worry about."

Weather was rough and unpredictable over the North Atlantic, and icing was blamed for downing one plane off the coast of Greenland.

Butler said before takeoff he thought it might be possible to fly around any bad weather encountered.

"It's part of the contest," Butler said. "The crew that adjusts best to bad conditions is the one that will manage the best speed."

ROLL TO VICTORIA

When his plane appeared slow to leave the runway at Abingdon, one burly matron among the 50-or-so spectators on the sun-drenched tarmac was heard to remark: "Migawd, that plane is going to roll to Victoria."

Winners' Car Stopped Dead on Them In Race So Tough Half Dropped Out

By IAN HAMILTON

What can you say about an 18-month-old car that almost died?

Ask its 35-year-old driver shortly after stepping out of the vehicle in first place at the end of the week-long Centennial '71 car rally. The answer is "Love Story," but without the unhappy ending.

"This rally was the roughest I've ever been in or heard about," said Hayden Gozzard, one half of the London, Ont., private entry which walked off with $3,000 of the $15,000 in prize and contingency money. "I'm not driving this thing back home, mainly because it wouldn't go another 500 miles."

Driving a Renault Gordini, Gozzard and navigator David Grundy, 26, lost 638 points to finish with a whopping 137 points margin under Tom Samida and Brian Fox of Ann Arbour, Mich., in second.

The American AMC Hornet entry, in turn, won about $1,750 excluding contingency awards in comparison to $1,300 for third-place finishers George Wirtjes of Toronto and Robert Baker of Richmond Hill in a Mazda.

As Gozzard and Grundy pulled up at "mile zero" of the Ottawa-to-Victoria rally at Douglas and Dallas Road shortly after noon, the congratulations of numerous well-wishers fell on tired, happy and, as they agreed, lucky ears.

Of 38 entries to leave Ottawa's Lansdowne Park in the midst of an Ottawa Rough Rider exhibition football game eight days before, only 17 teams managed to fight the weather and roads to a Victoria finish.

"Had the race been any tougher," said Gozzard, making it plain the only way his dust-covered Renault was ever going to make it back to Ontario was by rail, "no one would have finished."

He knows he almost didn't. Five miles away from the Nanaimo ferry early Wednesday morning his car stopped running because of mechanical difficulties. The winners might never have crossed the finishing line if it hadn't been for swift repair action from a local Renault representative.

With 70 per cent of the rally taking place on some of the worst road conditions organizers could muster up to test the mettle of the drivers and their cars, the high degree of mechanical difficulty was just what had official Jim Gunn ordered.

Tires, brakes, suspensions and major components of every car took a pounding and the weatherman threw in ideal conditions for testing, with a great deal of rain and sleet barring drivers' progress through the provincial capitals to the west coast.

Last Friday, with the event one-third over, Gozzard and Grundy pulled into Sault Ste. Marie in the lead of a 31-car pack. The weather at that time was all bad as well, with a driving rainstorm hindering progress.

By the time they hit Edmonton on Tuesday, 28 cars were left and Gunn was quoted as saying he was happy there was nothing but trouble so far and hoping it would get worse.

'I'm not driving this thing back home, because it wouldn't go another 500 miles'

It did. The route from Jasper to just north of Kamloops provided the most inclement weather of all because "it rained and rained and rained."

And while up till that time the lead had changed hands numerous times, even the favorites were falling by the wayside. Mechanical problems dropped Bruce and Betty Schmidt's Fiat entry from vying for first to an eventual finish in eighth. They were the top finishers among factory team competitors, as private entries accounted for all the glory of the top spots.

Finishing in fourth place was Katherine Edmond of Ottawa and Bill Momtgomery of Downsview, Ont., in a Datsun with 1,251 points. The pair picked up $1,050 in prize money, including the mixed-couple award.

Wolf Bergelt of West Vancouver and Craig Sanderson of Burnaby finished fifth in a Volkswagen with 1,301 points.

Jock Wilson of Cheltenham, Ont., and Bob Lindquirt of Don Mills, Ont., won $750 as the only drivers of a Class 3 auto to finish. Driving a Mercedes Benz, a fellow driver said they were dark horses, not expected to finish in their diesel-engine vehicle.

The only team to benefit from the poor conditions was Wirtjes and Baker. Starting the rally badly, they managed to work themselves up to ninth spot by the time they hit Jasper.

By steady driving through the mountains, they watched competitor after competitor drop off as they climbed to their third-place finish.

The rally was one of the biggest in North America with regard to prize money and one of the longest in the world. It was given full international status by the Federation de l'automobile in Paris, France.

But there was more to the affair than competition, with three medical personnel using the drivers as experimental subjects for testing the effects of driver fatigue. Dr. Pat Goodhall, Joan Bennett, a psychologist, and Ruth Medwell, a biologist, spent the week in putting the competitors through a number of tests which will help them in a study.

The winners were presented with prizes in a ceremony outside the legislative buildings in the early evening after a celebration party at The Empress.

LONE WITNESS

My Day in Court —Free, At Last!

Reginald J. Moir, of Kelowna, my oldest friend, has been visiting us this week and he couldn't have picked a more inopportune time. Reg is now Judge Moir, of the provincial court of that pleasant city, and if ever there was a week when I wanted no reminders of the complexities of jurisprudence this was it.

Clutched in my hot little hand on the very day of his arrival was a summons to appear as a witness in a case involving two motorists who reached a Fairfield intersection with but a single thought, namely the utter conviction that the other fellow would concede the right of away. Two of us — my maiden aunt and me — were the sole spectators of the resultant collision and since my maiden aunt is somewhat short-sighted the police had settled on me as the single witness.

In almost no time at all the case had taken on the proportions of the Dreyfus trial in my imagination and Reg was no comfort whatever in preparing me for my first and only day in court. One did encounter witnesses, he assured me, who were inclined to babble incoherently or even faint dead away and one or both fates seemed altogether likely in the case of a man who is seized with anxieties by simply attending a Parent-Teachers meeting.

True, my part in this litigation promised to be fleeting. I was to testify, it appeared, merely on the speed of the offending vehicle, an appearance, I was assured, that might last for two minutes. Still, as the fateful day approached I began to suspect that a great deal more was in store for me. I've seen too many episodes of Perry Mason, the Bold Ones and Men at Law to be lulled into false security. Judge Moir's reminder of the maxim, Testis unus testis nullus ("a single witness is no witness") was hardly soothing, either.

It occurred to me, for example, that I might be asked for my qualifications as a judge of speed. There would surely be a Smart Young Attorney Out to Make a Name for Himself, I figured, and in my recurring fantasies I could hear him sardonically demanding, "You are, I take it, a student of such matters?" The very thought of it was chilling. He'd have me there, all right.

But then the whole image changed in my mind. I saw myself casually flicking the lint from my lapels and murmuring modestly, "In a minor way, my dear sir, you might call me an expert. You see I am retained by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the United Nations as a consultant in the matter of speeds, particularly in the sonic range."

I could almost hear the appreciative titters from the spectators' gallery as the attorney, dumbfounded, took his seat in total confusion, his case hopelessly blasted. In fact I gave a little chuckle, myself, which caused my wife to glance sharply at me across the dinner table.

Somehow I'd come to think of my maiden aunt as The Woman In The Case. There is always a Woman In The Case in Perry Mason, as any fool knows. Again I seemed to hear the voice of my inquisitor: "Now, this woman you claim to have been escorting . . ."

"My Lord Chief Justice," I replied in a voice like granite, eyes blazing. "My learned friend is attempting to reduce this case to a trial of womanhood. I am delighted to accept his challenge. As I look about this court of justice today and see the shining faces of these mothers and wives I feel that I may rest my case . . ." The speech went on for a very long time above the muffled sobs of the spectators.

By Tuesday I had got around to the purely legal aspects of the case. Again I went through some unnerving daydreams of being cited for perjury or worse, but once more a reciprocating fancy came to my rescue. I imagined myself peering down at the prosecutor with a faint, superior twinkle in my eye as he stumbled through some murky point of law.

"You have something to say about this, Mr. Scott?" I heard the judge asking, ever so clearly.

"Very little, my lord," I replied coolly, "except to remind Your Lordship that a question of habeas corpus hardly applies. I should think it more one of res judicata which holds under such writs of mandamus and on that I direct Your Lordship's attention to the matter of tort . . . and retort!"

Well, sir, they were carrying me from the court on their shoulders after that. I was free, Johnny, free!

By Wednesday I was alternately convinced that I would either be struck dumb in the witness box or erupt into a flow of language unparalleled since Disraeli.

Indeed, I had begun to see the case not merely as a commonplace traffic mishap, but as one striking a fierce blow at the heart of free men everywhere.

"In this simple little case," I heard myself intoning (the reporters' pencils racing to record each polished word), "in this simple little case we see the wholes fabric of our democracy. To paraphrase Voltaire, I disagree with the plaintiff's opinions, but I will fight to the death for his right to hold them. These are times, My Lord Chief Justice, when we must examine not merely our minds, but our hearts. I am reminded of . . ."

So it went right up until the fateful morning when I sat, palpitating, awaiting my call, and a very large policeman approached me, causing me to leap to my feet with a truly terrible smile.

"They won't be needing you," he said. "Case is over."

"Very well, my lord," I croaked and stumbled blindly into the cell block.

Building Resumes At Manor Site

Blasting resumed today at the site of the multi-million-dollar Oak Bay Manor retirement centre after the builders, National Nursing Homes Ltd., pulled out of their management contract with strike-bound Sandringham Private Hospital.

A spokesman for Inter-Island Construction Ltd. said drilling and dynamiting would continue today and Saturday, and other excavating equipment would be moved back to the site Monday.

Pickets supporting striking nurses' aides at Sandringham had halted work at the Oak Bay Manor site Tuesday and Wednesday. There were no pickets there this morning.

National Nursing Homes negotiated last summer with the Sandringham strikers, who are seeking their first contract as a local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, since the 28 employees walked out last Sept. 30.

'NOT WORTH EFFORT'

Hospital administrator Margaret Reynolds said today the company had pulled out of its management role because the picketing at the manor site had made it "not worth the effort."

Management responsibility at the hospital will be assumed by the owners, Russell Shepherd of Vancouver and Jack McGill of Calgary.

The management switch was played down by Alex Markides, CUPE staff representative in the labor dispute. He said there had been "no real change" because Shepherd and McGill "have always been there."

"We hope, however, that one or both of them will take a look at the situation and negotiate with us to finalize an agreement."

'SWAP' DENIED BY UNIONS

Police Give Up Right to Strike

Greater Victoria police unions will give up their right to strike over a new contract, but the two major police commissions indicated today they will not close off the option of proceeding to the B.C. Mediation Commission if there is no settlement under mediator Clark Gilmour.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of the municipal police commission, said today he still believes the "appropriate and correct route" is through the mediator and mediation commission "unless I'm shown good reasons why not."

He also said he is "still adamant I will not negotiate through the media."

For the first time, he disclosed the Saanich commission's last offer to the Saanich Police Association. It called for increases in salary of 5 per cent on Jan. 1, 1971, 5 per cent July 1, 1971, and 5 per cent Jan. 1, 1972, in an 18-month contract. He said the association's negotiating committee rejected this.

Victoria police commission chairman, Mayor Courtney Haddock, said only that he is "quite sure . . that it will be settled with commonsense and reason."

At a joint meeting Wednesday night, the Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt police unions agreed to give up the right to strike and hoped the police commissions would relinquish their right to go before the B.C. mediation commission.

A spokesman for the unions, C. O. D. Branson, denied one published report that this was a "swap." He said the unions agreed to give up the strike right unconditionally.

Part of a statement issued on behalf of the unions said they "go on record as relinquishing their right to strike in hopes that the respective police commissions will be equally responsible and relinquish their right to go before the mediation commission."

The statement also said that if the police commissions don't agree not to go before the mediation commission, the unions will ask Labor Minister James Chabot for independent arbitration and will not appear before the commission.

The key reason, given in the statement, was that the unions "don't have confidence in the mediation commission." The commission set the pattern for Greater Victoria police salaries with a 1969 settlement which widened the gap with Vancouver.

Firemen, City Hall Stalemated

Wage negotiations between Victoria firemen and city hall appear stalemated today following flat rejection by each side of the other's contract proposal.

Union president Fred Severson said he has not formally met with city negotiators, but has notified them the membership has turned the city's offer down.

This offer consisted mainly of a two-year contract with four five-per-cent raises, a proposal identical to that offered Victoria police and similar to agreements already reached with city hall outside and inside staff.

Severson said Also the city "certainly turned us down flat" on the union's attempt to get a five-year contract on wages reaching parity with Vancouver in 1975.

Severson said he does not think talks have deteriorated completely, but the city's proposal included elimination of some fringe benefits. A meeting may be held at the end of next week.

First-class firemen earn $691 a month, five per cent below the Vancouver rate before that city's contract was settled at a new figure of $849.

arthur mayse

BACK WHEN THE YEAR was younger, a planner of residential towers offered a self-evident truth for Victorians to consider. Very many people, he pointed out, love cities and would be unhappy if exiled from them. But there are others to whom close-packed communities offer only disillusionment and starvation of the spirit. These endure while they must, and escape when they can.

One escape route leads to the commune.

You are, let us suppose, young, idealistic, and fed to the teeth with life as it confronts you. It may also be that you are deeply convinced that man by his abuse of nature is signing his own death warrant. With others of like mind, you borrow, lease or buy a few remote acres where you can follow your own life-style at peace with yourself and in harmony with the good earth.

There is no guarantee, of course, that the actuality of commune life may follow this somewhat visionary script. Some communes are no more than rural crash-pads, without aims, coherent program or future.

Not all such attempts fail, however, I'm told that perhaps half a dozen are achieving success on their own terms on one island or another of our Inside Passage string.

One communard group of about 14 young men and women is working a 20-acre farm. Its members grow their own food, and are building their own houses. For part of each year, some of them work on jobs that provide what cash the commune needs.

It's early to guess what the future holds for these colonizers who have embraced an old idea.

It's possible that what they've started in their remote location may conceivably expand through the years into a town, and thereby undo the intent of the founders.

In any case, they are committed to the search for Utopia that has occupied others before them on the British Columbia coast.

In proof that one company of seekers achieved a pretty fair approximation of their dream, the trim and tiny fishing village of Sointula stands sturdily above its harbor on Malcolm Island not far from Alert Bay. Today, 70 years after the first hardy Finlanders put in at the island, Sointula is still populated almost entirely by Canadians of Finish extraction.

Its name signifies "Place of Harmony", and though harmony has not always prevailed there, Sointula earned the distinction of being British Columbia's first successful commune.

It owes its existence to the disappointment of immigrants who came to the New World expecting a better life than the Vancouver Island coal-towns held for them. They found a stern and fiery prophet in Matti Kurikka, set up a colonization scheme on co-operative lines and obtained a land grant from the provincial government.

More than once the colony teetered on the edge of disaster. But it survived, and in due time, made peace with capitalist doctrine to the point of approving private ownership of homes, boats and gear.

There have been Indian utopias, like the closed and secret village of China Hat. And south of Nanaimo, at Cedar and in the De Courcey islands, a strange little man once established a utopia in reverse.

He was a sect leader of many aliases, but he won notoriety as Brother Twelve. Most of the over-trustful converts to his Aquarian Foundation were well-heeled women; from whom Brother Twelve extracted slavish obedience and many thousands of dollars.

In the late 1920s, a rift in the Aquarian Foundation landed its leader in court in Nanaimo. But Brother Twelve went free, to dominate his remaining disciples and eventually skip the country.

Washington State also had its utopias. These flourished for a while, then fell apart. May today's communards do the thing better!

North's Survival of Bombing Outlined in Pentagon Papers

By ARTHUR L. GACSHON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon Papers lift the lid on how North Vietnam survived the fury of American bombing through 1965, the year the United States entered the war fully.

Copies of the top-secret documents released by Senator Mike Gravel (D — Alaska) also disclosed things might have been worse for the North Vietnamese had president Johnson adopted a proposal by the late John McNaughton, then an assistant defence secretary.

This was for a plan to destroy the system of locks and dams in the North, thereby flooding rice fields and raising the possibility of famine.

A McNaughton memorandum quoted in the documents said his plan should be studied.

"Such destruction does not kill or drown people. By shallow-flooding the rice, it leads after time to widespread starvation (more than a million?) unless food is provided . . ."

The United States could offer food "at the conference table."

NEVER IMPLEMENTED

The Pentagon analysis gave no clues as to where the McNaughton plan ended up but it was never implemented.

The papers say that after American intervention in force that year, the expectation among some Washington policy-makers was that a patient old revolutionary like Ho Chi Minh might defer this dream of taking over South Vietnam until another day.

Instead Hanoi remained as defiant as ever, its leaders seemingly resolved to endure the worst until the Americans were beaten.

The Communists shifted their southern strategy from all-out attack to that of the long haul — "Designed to wear out the opposition and prepare the ground for an eventual political settlement.

"There was no sign that bombing the North either alone or in combination with other U.S. actions, had brought about any greater readiness to settle except on their terms."

WHAT WENT WRONG?

How could a country so small, seemingly so unsophisticated, be able to stand up to the U.S. might?

Explaining what went wrong the analysis concluded: The terrain in Vietnam did not lend itself to effective deployment of modern weapons. There were no obvious industrial targets to hit. There were few sizable confrontations of power, and thus few opportunities for forces of each side to slug it out.

Instead, in many ways it was a fight against guerrilla phantoms, with the troops of North Vietnam linking up with the Viet Cong insurgents of the South, while all the time intrigue, manoeuvre, internecine rivalries weakened the Saigon government.

As if that were not enough political factors tied one of President Johnson's hands. To lash out too hard against the North would be to risk world war which the president was not prepared to do. To campaign too softly would, in McNaughton's words, be to produce "an escalating stalemate" that would bog down American forces indefinitely.

'RIDE OUT THE STORM'

"In the North the regime battened down and prepared to ride out the sotrm. With Soviet and Chinese help it greatly strengthened its air defences. . . .

"Economic development plans were laid aside. Imports were increased to offset production losses. Bombed facilities were in most cases simply abandoned. The large and vulnerable barracks and storage depots were replaced by dispersed and concealed ones.

"Several hundred thousand workers were mobilized to keep the transportation system operation. Miles of by-pass roads were built around choke-points to make . . . Traffic shifted to night time, poor weather and camouflage."

Difficulties abounded, said the report.

"Yet North Vietnam survived. The termine had not collapsed and it had not given in. And it still sent men and supplies into South Vietnam."

LONDON — An American woman who describes herself as the Beatles' No. 1 fan says she was socked in the nose by one of the objects of her devotion. Carolyn Mitchell, 24, of Salt Lake City, says she was sitting on the lawn of one of Paul McCartney's neighbors when the Beatle drove up and "started screaming and cursing and calling me things." She says McCartney hit her and pulled her hair. McCartney said he told her in "ne uncertain terms" to go away, but did not hit her.

NEW YORK — Unable to resist "such a delicious moment," Hermione Gingold, 74 says she has yielded to a proposal of marriage from a London antique dealer she has known for 20 years. "He loves antiques and I think that's why he fell for me," the British comedienne said Thursday. She identified her suitor as Beaudoin Mills.

PARIS — Kleber Bougeat and Jean Schaffner are suing a women's magazine for publishing a photograph of them holding glasses of wine with the caption, "The Evils of Drink." Not only are they not alcoholics, they said, but the picture has hurt them professionally. They are official water-tasters for the city of Paris.

KENT, Ohio — Pulitzer Prize-winning author James A. Michener announced today he has donated $100,000 to the Kent State University school of art. Michener recently wrote "Kent State: What Happened And Why," a report of the May, 1970, KSU disorders and fatal shootings of four students. The author stipulated the gift was to be used to purchase 20 additional works of art, to be known as the James A. Michener art collection.

NAPLES, Italy — Someone has removed the tombstone from the grave of tenor Enrico Caruso, one of the all-time greats of opera, police said today. They said vandals broke into the locked family vault in Naples' Poggioreale cemetery and removed the marble slab but did not touch the urn with Caruso's remains.

SEDALIA, Mo. — Newton E. Foster, 51, of Sedalia, was fined $25 in municipal court Wednesday for disorderly conduct by biting a dog. Lulu Mae Scroggings of Sedalia brought her dog to court and showed its wound, a one-inch slash on the flank. Foster told Judge Lawrence Englund he had not bitten the dog but told Mrs. Scroggings he had as a joke.

RED SHIELD TOPS GOAL OF $85,000

The Salvation Army's Red Shield Appeal has exceeded its $85,000 objective, making this year's appeal the most successful ever held in Greater Victoria.

General manager Lyle Wicks said the volunteer workers and citizens of Victoria have raised $89,000.

The 1972 campaign chairman will be John Wade, this year's vice-president and special names division chairman. Wade is also a member of the Army's Citizen's Advisory Board.

HELD BY SWISS is American drug advocate Dr. Timothy Leary, who was arrested Wednesday. Leary is expected to apply for political asyium to avoid deportation to the U.S. where he must finish a jail term for possession of marijuana.

Government Appealing Juvenile Court Decision

The provincial government has taken the issue of 17-year-olds in adult court to the Supreme Court of Canada, appealing a B.C. Appeal court decision that 17-year-olds are juveniles.

Attorney-General Peterson launched the appeal against the June 21 provincial appeal court decision that termed 17-year-olds juveniles.

The status of 17-year-olds before the courts in B.C. has changed three times since the beginning of the year.

BACKLOG

A Vancouver proviacial court judge in January ruled that a federal proclamation claiming 17-year-olds as adults in court was illegal because it infringed on earlier provincial jurisdiction.

The federal government last October proclaimed, at the request of B.C., that 17-year-olds were adults in court rather than juveniles.

The B.C. Supreme Court in April overturned the January provincial court decision and the backlog of 17-year-olds before the courts began to move through courts again as adults.

But their status again changed with the June 21 decision of the B.C. Appeal court

A spokesman for Peterson's office said Wednesday the case before the Supreme Court of Canada will be handled by an Ottawa lawyer representing the B.C. government.

He said 17-year-olds will continue to be charged as juveniles pending the Supreme Court decision.

LOCAL TEACHER GUYANA-BOUND

John Kenwood, chairman of the science department at Lansdowne Junior Secondary, will be one of 59 teachers from across Canada leaving Ottawa Wednesday to work in developing countries.

The teachers have volunteered to spend the summer without salary helping instructors in overseas countries to upgrade their teaching skills and strengthen their professional teacher organizations.

Of 54 volunteers assigned to 11 countries in Asia, the West Indies and Africa last year, Kenwood spent the summer in South Africa. For his second trip, he has been assigned to Guyana.

The Grade 10 teacher leaves Victoria Sunday for a two-day orientation course at Ottawa University, geared to preparing the volunteers for their assignments in 11 West Indian and African countries.

The program is part of the Canadain Teachers' Federation Project Overseas, as sponsored by the group, its provincial and territorial teacher organizations and the Canadian International Development Agency.

Junk Mail Row Erupts

Postmen Threaten Walkout

OTTAWA (CP) — Leaders of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada were meeting with post office officials this afternoon to try to prevent a dispute about delivery of "junk" or third-class mail from erupting into a national walkout.

Jim Mayes, first vice-president of the union, said in an interview today that he will ask postal officials to delay imposing new delivery regulations until he can meet Deputy Postmaster-General J. A. H. Mackay next week.

He said that if the post office goes ahead with its plans to reorganize the delivery system for "dear householder" mail, "we can't be responsible for the reaction of the membership."

Earlier, a union spokesman said a bulletin will go out to all of the 12,000 union members today advising them to "lock up and leave" if they are forced to conform to the post office proposals.

William Findlay, second vice-president of the letter carriers, said in an interview the post office had breached an agreement signed April 3 regarding junk mail handling.

A July 1 telegram from P. C. Valois, the head of the post office's staff relations, said the post office intends to continue with union-opposed changes in handling junk mail.

"He's threatened us," said Findlay.

"He's a new fellow down there that feels the old brigade has been too soft on us. Well, we're sending out a bulletin today to all our members and when junk mail comes in our people will refuse to touch it.

"We'll lock up and leave."

WANT EXTRA MINUTE

Findlay said all the letter carriers want is "an extra minute a day" to sort such mail — circulars, advertising brochures and the like.

Unless the letter carriers receive this extra minute, Findlay said, "there is no way we touch these things."

He said Roger Decarie, co-chairman of the Council of Postal Unions and head of the letter carriers, had left instructions to have members walk off the job if the post office did not comply with the union-requested changes. Decarie is on a holiday in the Maritimes.

"He was so damn mad when he left he told us to

HUMAN CANCER VIRUS ISOLATED

HOUSTON, Tex. (Reuter) — American scientists announced Friday they have isolated and extracted a human cancer virus for the first time.

The development, climaxing mounting speculation that viruses play a leading role in the cause of some human cancers, was seen as opening a new front in the world-wide battle against the disease.

Isolation of the virus was announced by the M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute here.

It said a team headed by Dr. Elizabeth S. Priori and Dr. Leon Dmochowski had isolated a spherical-shaped virus known as Type C virus.

It was extracted from cells grown in tissue culture and obtained originally from a biopsy of a child with Burkitt's lymphoma. This is a cancer of the lymphatic system, frequently involving bones in the face and knees and predominantly found in African children.

Dr. Priori said: "The availability of this virus provides a tool of great potential for investigation of the role of viruses in human cancer and perhaps even for vaccination studies." Dr. R. Lee Clark, president of the Anderson Institute — one of the foremost of its kind in he world — said the research could help "expedite that day when we can define the actual role of the virus in causing some cancers."

Cosmonaut Deaths Result of Air Leak

LONDON (AP) — The Moscow correspondent of the London Evening News says the three Soviet cosmonauts died because "they failed to seal the hatch of their spacecraft properly."

The usually well-informed correspondent, Victor Louis, a Russian, says this explanation of the death of the three Soviet spacemen was put forth by Moscow scientists gathered for the state funeral.

"Human error and mechanical failure between them caused creeping depressurization in the spacemen's nine-foot cabin and deprived the astronauts of life-supporting oxygen on the final phase of their journey," Louis writes.

"As I understand it," he adds, "the spacecraft's hatchway opened slightly in the turbulence of re-entry to the earth's atmosphere—enough to suck the cosmonauts' air supply into space."

The word, says Louis, is that a design fault caused the tragedy.

The cosmonauts — Georgy Dobrovosky, Vladislav Volkov and Victor Patsayev — were laid to rest today in the Kremlin Wall, the traditional burial place for Russia's fallen heroes.

The cosmonauts were eulogized at funeral ceremonies in Red Square for their flight aboard the world's first space laboratory.

Mstislav V. Keldysh, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, told the thousands of Russians assembled in Red Square for the cosmonauts' funeral and they had "opened up vast possibilities for all mankind."

$7 Million Gift Icing On B.C. Birthday Cake

By IAN HAMILTON

It was the kind of birthday party you had to be at to appreciate.

Prime Minister Trudeau, Premier W. A. C. Bennett, 14 federal cabinet ministers and assorted provincial dignitaries led a crowd of over 3,000 spectators Thursday morning in July 1 Centennial celebrations.

The second political "who's who" in Victoria in two weeks, the affair rivalled the constitutional conference in mid-June for finger-snapping and long questioning stares as tourists and natives attempted to identify the various big-name guests.

Trudeau himself provided the icing for the provincial cake, announcing in a nationally-televised speech "gifts from the people of Canada." To wit, the dispersal of the $7 million remaining from Ottawa's $10 million Centennial grant to B.C.

A $4.5 million fund will be set up to develop natural conservation areas, called the Second Century fund of B.C., and the remaining $2.5 million will build a museum to house Indian artifacts at the University of B.C.

In keeping with the prime minister's style, there was as much informality involved in the 1½ hours of political pomp as ceremony would allow. However, the holiday air was not all devoid of loud protesting noises.

The legislative lawns contained a minority of placard-toting demonstrators who tried unsuccessfully to hold the attention of the dignitaries.

TWO FIGHTS

Two fights broke out in the crowd, one between a grey-haired stocky man and an Amchitka 2 sympathizer and the other a minor scuffle between a pair of women's lib pro-abortionists and a woman who resented either their sign or their continual yelling.

Police broke up both skirmishes easily and the various speakers appeared not to be unduly perturbed with the numerous shouts of derison on such subjects as inflation, Canadian complicity in Vietnam, seal hunting, abortion and economic independence.

Highlight of festivities was the reading of a proclamation by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson calling on "Canadians everywhere to acknowledge and join in the celebration of British Columbia on the 100th anniversary."

The first federal cabinet meeting held in B.C. preceded the reading, as Ottawa leaders signed it inside the legislative builging.

Later, with the sun break-

DOMINION DAY . . . PICTURES AND WORDS

Dominion Day meant a variety of things to Victorians depending on where they were and what they saw. A page of pictures on Page 25 shows some of the things that went on in the capital city over the holiday.

Events included Indian canoe races, presentation of flags and the start of the England-to-Victoria air competition.

Hydro Workers Back at Job After 11th-Hour Meeting

Electrical workers were back on the job at B.C. Hydro today following an 11-day strike.

The 2,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 258, returned voluntarily following a summit meeting with Labor Minister James Chabot late Thursday night.

"Both sides have resolved their differences," Chabot said after a 3½-hour session with representatives of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

ARBITRATION

"Hydro has agreed to a third party arbitrator and the union has agreed to arbitration."

The 11th-hour turn of events came just before the midnight deadline the union faced as a result of the government invoking the act and compulsory arbitration Wednesday.

Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Court of Appeal will arbitrate the dispute, but outside the provisions of the act which has attracted almost universal opposition from provincial unions.

Mr. Chabot said Mr. Justice Nemetz will not meet with either side until after he returns from a world congress of judges conference in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 2.

"And until such time as the dispute is resolved, the conditions of the expired contract continue," said the labor minister.

HOW LONG

"I cannot even assume how long it will take him to come down with a decision after he meets with the two sides."

The dispute began with a series of spot strikes and gradually escalated. The union is seeking an 18.5-per-cent wage increase over two years on a base rate of $5.39 an hour. Hydro, a Crown corporation, has offered 14 per cent.

The activities which led to the voluntary return-to-work agreement started Wednesday with the provincial government ordering both sides back to work under the act "to protect the public interest and welfare." The government's order-in-council also named Mr. Justice Nemetz as sole arbitrator.

BINDING

He was to make a recommendation for a contract and if both sides didn't accept it, or agree to change it, the contract would have been made binding by the B.C. Mediation Commission.

NEMETZ
. . . all up to him

Mr. Justice Nemetz wired Mr. Chabot that he was ready to accept the post as arbitrator and listed three problem areas.

He said he was not prepared to make a contract recommendation which could be refused, he would not participate as arbitrator unless both sides agreed to have him and he could not take the job until he returned from the judges' conference in Europe.

"I'm leaving town in the morning and I certainly don't want to sound as if I rebuffed anyone," said Mr. Justice Nemetz Thursday night.

Cong Propose PoW Release With Pullout

Times News Services

PARIS — A proposal advanced Thursday by the Viet Cong delegation to the deadlocked Vietnam peace talks here offered repatriation of all prisoners of war held by Hanoi, in return for complete withdrawal of United States and allied forces from Vietnam by the end of 1971.

Reaction in Washington to the proposal was mixed, ranging from skepticism in some quarters about the motives behind the offer, to guarded optimism that genuine progress toward peace is starting.

The official White House and state department stance is the seven-point plan contans "positive as well as clearly unacceptable elements" and will be given serious study.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird indicated that there would be little difficulty in pulling all U.S. troops out of Vietnam by the end of the year but the cost to the American taxpayer would run to billions of dollars.

Crash Kills Children

CHESTER, England (AP) — Two coaches of a train packed with 400 children on a seaside outing came off the rails near this historic city today in what police called "a major disaster."

Some reports said a number of persons were trapped in the wreckage of one overturned coach. A railway spokesman said two children were feared dead and up to 40 injured.

VICTORIA PILOT FIRST ACROSS

Victoria businssman Claude Butler, leading the field into Quebec City on the first lap of the London-Victoria Air Race, said today he "doesn't have a chance at the prize money."

Butler, 59, is flying a twin-turboprop Aerostar with four of its six seats removed to allow more space for fuel tanks. He was first off the tarmac at Abingdon airfield near London Thursday, and retained his lead into Quebec City, end of the first major leg of the $170,000 race.

His pessimism about prize-money chances is based on the fact that his speedy Aerostar is laboring under a stiff handicap compared with smaller, slower aircraft in the race.

Co-pilot is Harold Aasen of Delta, B.C., manager of a Butler store in Whalley.

An exhausted Butler called his wife at their home at 1781 Verling at 3:30 a.m. Victoria time today to report his safe arrival. He was whisked to hotel by race officials to rest up for take-off July 4, when crews of slower planes will have arrived and rested for the next lap.

"I was terribly worried while he was over the Atlantic," Mrs. Butler said. "I'm not worried any longer. While they're over Canada there's nothing to worry about."

Weather was rough and unpredictable over the North Atlantic, and icing was blamed for downing one plane off the coast of Greenland.

Butler said before takeoff he thought it might be possible to fly around any bad weather encountered.

"It's part of the contest," Butler said. "The crew that adjusts best to bad conditions is the one that will manage the best speed."

ROLL TO VICTORIA

When his plane appeared slow to leave the runway at Abingdon, one burly matron among the 50-or-so spectators on the sun-drenched tarmac was heard to remark: "Migawd, that plane is going to roll to Victoria."

TWO CANADIANS RESCUED, BAD WEATHER PREVAILS

Mutiny, Crash Spice Air Race

A plane with two men aboard went down in the Atlantic and a co-pilot mutinied, kicked out his pilot and flew on alone in the opening stages of the London-Victoria Air Race today.

The downed plane hit an ice floe about 10 miles off the southwestern coast of Greenland. Rescue officials said the men were picked up by one of two Danish helicopters taking part in a rescue-operation cover for the race.

The plane, designed as a single-engine Viking 300, carried W. F. Sneider of Brampton, Ont., and P. R. Gilmore of Toronto.

Rescue operations were conducted from "somewhere in Greenland," the officials said.

Dirty weather conditions prevailed as gaudily-painted aircraft from nine countries started their dash for Victoria Thursday from Abingdon Air Force Base northwest of London, chasing $170,000 in prize money.

The mutiny occurred when two Americans had a fight in mid-air Thursday night. When the smoke had cleared, the co-pilot was flying on alone and the pilot and owner of the aircraft was in hospital in Scotland recovering from cuts and bruises.

The injured man, Dr. Lawrence Dennis, a 56-year-old osteopath from Milwaukee, Ore., told police he and pilot Roger Flanagan of Canby, Ore., tangled in midair when Dennis insisted they turn back for repairs.

The plane, a four-seat Mooney Ranger, landed at Prestwick and "there was an incident on the tarmac," police said. "Dr Dennis was left lying on the ground bleeding from a face injury.

"His co-pilot went to the aircraft, which immediately took off again."

Dr. Dennis was not seriously injured.

The plane passed through Reykjavik, Iceland, early today and headed for Greenland. Officials of the race in London said the plane might be disqualified if flown solo but that was up to headquarters in Canada.

Police said Dennis is co-owner of the aircraft with another doctor.

Dennis told reporters he paid $5,000 to finance his attempt to win the $170,000 race, including a fee to his co-pilot. "I had to have someone along with instrument-flying experience," he said.

Hannagan, 22, is a flying instructor at the airport where Dennis usually keeps his plane.

"After taking off from Prestwick, we realized a door was not shut properly," Dennis said.

"Hannagan tried to shut it without success. I wanted to turn back but he disagreed, saying we would lose valuable time.

"There was quite a skir-
